FINNS FIRE ON RED PLANES

Will Not Give in, Russia Warned

HELSINGFORS, Nov. 15 (INS)—Drawing repeated machine gun fire, Soviet aircraft flew continuously over Finnish Karelia today as Finland prepared to resist Soviet pressure aimed at forcing compliance with the rejected Russian demands.

The Russian aerial demonstrations were carried out as the Moscow negotiators, Dr. Juho Paasikivi and Finance Minister V. A. Tanner, returned to Helsingfors from the Soviet capital.

With all signs pointing to a long "war of nerves" between tiny Finland and huge Russia, authorities made it clear that Finland is ready to maintain her defense measures and other precautions for months rather than give in to Soviet demands for naval and air bases on the Finnish coast.

Tanner, however, in an interview given at the Soviet-Finnish border before reaching Helsingfors, indicated that the Soviet farewell to the Finnish negotiators was friendly despite the breakdown in the talks.

"When we were leaving Moscow," he declared, "Soviet Dictator Josef Stalin with a friendly smile wished Finland all happiness. Premier V. M. Molotov said 'Au Revoir.'"

But Risto Ryti, chief of the bank of Finland, indicated that the nation is prepared to hold out for a long time against Russian pressure.

"The Russians," he declared, "are too optimistic if they think Finland cannot maintain its present defense economy for more than four to seven months.

"According to the Moscow newspaper Pravda, our defense costs are between 30,000,000 and 60,000,000 marks a day. This is not true. Even 30,000,000 marks is many times too high a sum.

"The Russian press says there has been a run on Finnish banks. That is not true. The Finnish state has not borrowed even one mark from the Bank of Finland.

"Note circulation some time ago was higher because of the evacuation of 100,000 persons from danger areas and the need of some money reserves, but this is all normal now.

"Even after the new defense loan is fully signed, Finland will have no more than 400,000,000 Swedish crowns (about $92,000,000) in liabilities, which is very little in comparison to other states.

"Despite the war, Finnish exports are being maintained at 90 per cent of normal."

NAZIS' AIR WAR 'JUST BEGINNING'

BERLIN, Nov. 15 (INS)—Germany's aerial warfare against Britain "is only beginning," while the U-boat campaign "shows British shipping what it means to be at war with Germany," it was declared today in an authoritative explanation of Monday's and Tuesday's attacks on the Shetland islands.

"German attacks will take place frequently at times and places not foreseen in England," said a statement read over the official German wireless.

"The attack on the Shetland islands followed discovery in port there of two cruisers, several smaller vessels, nine flying boats, some cargo steamers, and one large passenger steamer.

"German fighting planes directed their attacks against one of the cruisers and the flying boats.

"Despite the fire of light and heavy antiaircraft batteries, German airmen steered straight from beyond the clouds towards their objectives.

"Two flying boats were destroyed by a well-aimed 50-kilogram (110-pound) bomb. Another heavy bomb presumably hit the cruiser, according to the evidence of an airman who observed a glow of fire as well as columns of smoke arising from the ship."

Greek Steamship Hits Wreck, Founders

LONDON, Nov. 15 (AP)—The 2216-ton Greek steamer Georgios sank today off the east coast of England after colliding with a half-submerged wreck.

Her crew of 22 was rescued by a Coast Guard lifeboat. None was injured.

DISASTER REPEATED—Like this today is the raging oil fire sweeping its way uncontrolled in the Venezuelan town of Maracaibo, just as it did in 1929, when this photo was taken. Reports estimate a loss of between 500 to 800 persons, with the town completely destroyed.

Rush Medical Aid In Oil Fire Disaster

CARACAS, Venezuela, Nov. 15 (INS)—The government of Venezuela, assisted by American and British oil companies, rushed fire fighting and medical supplies today to Lagunillas, oil terminal city built on piles at Lake Maracaibo, which was destroyed by flame sthat reportedly killed an estimated 500 to 800 persons.

Although it was believed several American Oil Co. employes and their families lived near the stricken city, none was reported missing or injured.

Reports from the scene described the oil fire as the worst disaster in the history of the rich Lake Maracaibo oil fields.

The government proclaimed three days of national mourning for victims.

Advices reaching Caracas said at least 2000 wooden houses, built on piles driven into the bottom of the lake, were destroyed.

Many of the victims were said to have been burned or drowned as they leaped into the lake, only to be consumed by flames which spread through the oil slick covering the water.

Many more were lost when a launch in which they were trying to escape overturned, hurling them into the lake.

(In New York it was reported two oil companies, Standard Oil of New Jersey and Gulf Oil, dperated a portion of the fields at Lagunillas. Shell Oil Co., a British concern, also was said to be carrying on operations there through a subsidiary, the Caribbean Petroleum Co.)

The thick coating of oil on the lake was caused by drilling operations through the bottom to tap an oil field discovered there several years ago.

The Venezulean cabinet held an emergency meeting to draw up decrees necessary to provide food, medicine, physicians and nurses for the burned city.

All fire fighting apparatus was ordered by the government, along with provisions for the injured and homeless, loaded aboard commandeered trucks and automobiles for transportation to Lagunillas. All available boats were commandeered at Lake Maracaibo to aid the victims.

Report Jimmy To Be Producer

NEW YORK, Nov. 15 (INS)—Variety, daily publication of the amusement world, today said that James Roosevelt, son of the President, is planning to enter the motion picture production on his own as an independent producer.

The story added that Roosevelt's contract as vice-president of Samuel Goldwyn productions expires next Dec. 31. His own productions, it was reported, have not yet been given a trade name but distribution terms already have been discussed with George J. Schaefer, president of RKO, "and a definite deal may be consummated in a few weeks."

Variety said that producing headquarters will be set up in Hollywood. "Several important producing names," it added, are mentioned in connection with the reported Roosevelt unit.

Naziist Snoozes Way Out of War

BASEL, Nov. 15 (AP)—Neutral Switzerland today took her first prisoner of the war, a yawning German soldier.

Officials who found him asleep on his rifle in the last coach of a train from Germany awakened him and told him he would be interned for the duration of the war.

4 More of Destroyer Victims Found Safe

LONDON, Nov. 15 (AP)—The admiralty announced today that four of the six men previously reported missing from an unnamed British destroyer sunk by a German mine now are known to have been saved.

A fifth was reported in a hospital with serious injuries.

The revised casualty list includes one dead, nine missing and 18 wounded.

Name F. R. Sullivan To Dowd's Job; Jail Break Plot Is Foiled

Frederick R. Sullivan, 34-year-old chairman of the Boston school committee and former Harvard boxing champion, today was named by Governor Saltonstall to succeed John F. Dowd, who resigned as sheriff of Suffolk County while under fire.

Sullivan's appointment came shortly after a revelation that a potential jail break was nipped at the Charles St. Jail three weeks ago by alertness of a guard.

Foil Charles St. Jail Break Plot

Anthony Indrisano, Charles St. Jail officer, paid $500 to William J. Armstrong, courthouse superintendent, to hold his job, he told Asst. Dist. Atty. Frederick E. Doyle today a short time after it was learned a wholesale delivery of prisoners there had been foiled just three weeks ago.

Indrisano shouted his accusation to Doyle, Special Investigator Atty. George McGonigle and a stenographer in the district atorney's office.

"He told me, 'The men who don't pay don't stay,'" said Indrisano, who is a brother of Johnny Indrisano, boxer, golfer and ex-bodyguard for Mae West.

"LIE," SAYS ARMSTRONG

A few minutes later, Armstrong, who was named as co-conspirator with John F. Dowd, former sheriff, in Bar Association charges of county graft, talked to reporters.

"It's a lie," he said. "I never was down to the jail and you can put that in the papers."

Asked if Indrisano had ever, at

FREDERICK R. SULLIVAN
Named Sheriff

Council O.K.'s New Sheriff

Frederick R. Sullivan of Charlestown, Boston school committeeman, was named by Gov. Saltonstall today as sheriff of Suffolk County to succeed John F. Dowd, who resigned under fire.

Under suspension of the rule that provides for one week consideration, the council approved the Governor's choice and Sullivan was immediately sworn in.

Sullivan, parochial school and Harvard graduate, entered politics in 1933. He is a noted orator and has shown himself a powerful vote-getter in two elections. He is not married.

His name was submitted to the Governor's Council when its regular meeting opened today.

ON HARVARD CREWS

Sullivan was born and brought up in Charlestown. He was graduated from St. Mary's parochial school there and then attended Boston Latin school. He was graduated from Harvard College in 1927 and from the Harvard Business school two years later.

While an undergraduate he was coxswain of two Harvard crews, one of which defeated Yale in the annual Thames river classic. He was also champion of his class in boxing.

After graduation he coached the 150-pound Harvard crew and instructed in boxing.

He next studied law at Boston College evening law school and was active in the affairs of St. Paul's Catholic Club. Last year he was district chairman of the Community Fund campaign.

In 1933 he was elected to the school committee and was chosen chairman in 1936 and again in 1938. In 1936 he sought the Democratic nomination for state treasurer. He has been a Democrat in politics, but took no part in recent statewide contests.

After Sullivan's name had been submitted to the council today a

MRS. CORDELIA BROACA OF BARNSTABLE
Seeks Weekly Alimony Increase From Ex-Mate

BROACA PETITIONS COURT TO LIFT BAN ON BANK ACCOUNT

BARNSTABLE, Nov. 15—Contesting his ex-wife's petition for a $57 weekly alimony increase, Johnnie Broaca, Cleveland Indians baseball pitcher, sought in probate court today to have attachments on his bank accounts lifted.

The one-time New York Yankee star denied his ex-wife was "destitute" and "virtually without clothes."

This was the contention of Mrs. Cordelia Ireland Broaca in seeking to have her alimony boosted from $18 to $75 weekly to care for herself and her two-year-old son, Johnnie, Jr.

Johnny Broaca

Broaca was divorced in a bitter court battle here two years ago, when he was pitching for the Yankees. At that time, Broaca's mates voted Mrs. Broaca $1000 of their World Series jackpot.

In her new petition, Mrs. Broaca appeared before Judge Collen C. Campbell without stockings and said she was without funds to purchase clothing.

"I've had but one new dress since last spring. I've had no new stockings—no blankets—no blankets for baby—no overcoat for me—no clothing for the baby," she told the court.

She wants to take the baby into a heated apartment for the winter, she said, declaring Johnny could afford it as she had received a deposition from the Cleveland baseball club he was paid $8000 last year.

"How much do you figure you would want for necessary living expenses?" Johnny's counsel asked.

"$75 a week," she replied quickly, adding that living expenses for herself and baby alone amounted to $25 a week.

Judge Campbell inquired at one stage whether there was any possibility of a reconciliation, to which Mrs. Broaca's counsel, Robert E. French, replied:

"You wouldn't expect too much love and affection from a wife struggling to get along on $18 a week when her husband is getting $8000."

Princess Loses Damage Suit

PRINCESS HOHENLOHE

LONDON, Nov. 15 (INS)—Justice Tucker in the King's Bench division today handed down a judgment in favor of Lord Rothermere, British newspaper publisher, in a suit for damages brought by Princess Stefanie Hohenlohe-Waldenburg.

The princess was ordered to pay the costs of the action.

Princess Stefanie's suit was based upon missions undertaken for Lord Rothermere in connection with his efforts for the rehabilitation of Hungary.

Lord Rothermere's attorney stated he had made many gifts and payments to the princess and that her claims for additional remuneration were without justification.

LAY GIRL'S DEATH TO LOW MARK

Ethel Gadsden, 14-year-old Roxbury girl found hanging from a hinge on the bathroom door of her home in Rockland st., hanged herself because she couldn't face low marks from school, police said her mother told them today.

Near collapse at the home of her sister in Warren st., Roxbury, Mary Sullivan, the mother, who is living apart from her husband and has resumed her maiden name, was quoted by police as admitting she had destroyed a note left by her daughter "Because I didn't want the police to know it was suicide."

In the note, police said she told them, the girl had written:

"This is a very naughty thing to do, but I can't face it. This is the best way out."

"I changed two E's on my report card to B's."

Mrs. Sullivan said the night before she had told the girl of receiving a note asking her to call on the principal of the Lewis School in Roxbury, where Ethel was a ninth grade student.

"I asked her what she had done at school that I should have to go there, and she said, 'Nothing, mother,'" Mrs. Sullivan was quoted by police as telling them.

The mother said, according to police, Ethel was jealous of her brother Henry's marks at the Memorial High School, where Henry, 16, is a student, and that she was tortured by the twittings of other Lewis School pupils at her marks.

KANE, VOKE SWEEP, BUT DEVIR IS VOTED OUT

William E. Kane of Woburn and Edward J. Voke of Chelsea were mayoralty victors today after elections in three cities that brought defeat to Mayor John D. Devir of Malden by 453 votes.

Although nursing a punched jaw, Mayor Kane night-hearted following a 1287-victory he hailed as a "triumphant Massachusetts taxpayers." Defeated School Committeemanary M. Leen.

Mayor Kane ued this statement as the final figures assured his victory:

"The result of the voting will serve as a notification to all public officials that the citizens of all parties will indorse every honest effort to reduce oppressive and unnecessary taxation.

"I pledge myself to continue practicing the theory of recent origin—to the victor belongs the responsibility for good government."

Mayor Voke won handily in Chelsea with 9462 votes to 6550 for his opponent, State Sen. Bernard L. Sullivan.

In Malden, Mayor Devir congratulated the winner, former Mayor and Rep. William A. Hastings, but ordered the ballots impounded in view of a possible recount. The vote was Hastings, 9349; Devir, 8896.

WOBURN

Mayor William E. Kane held the political spotlight in Massachusetts today on his victory over School Committeeman Henry M. Leen—a victory which went hand in hand with a punched jaw and black eye.

The vote was Kane, 5230; Leen, 4093.

The Woburn election had been watched throughout the state following a minor primary setback when Mayor Kane was defeated by a scant margin in the primaries. Although Leen won the Democratic nomination, the mayor won out among the Republicans and predicted that election day would find him on the top of the heap.

That was where he was this morning, promising continued municipal economies which have reduced the Woburn tax rate by $11 since he first took office two years ago.

Katherine G. Brennan, Peter E. McHugh and Gertrude E. Shea were unopposed for election to the school committee for four year terms and Henry D. Blake, Edward G. Boyle, and James DiBlasio were elected without contest for terms of two years.

MALDEN

Mayor John D. Devir went down to defeat before Rep. William A. Hastings, who 35 years ago won his first mayoralty victory.

The vote was by but a margin of 432 votes; Hastings, 9349; Devir, 8896.

The ballots were immediately impounded awaiting a possible recount demand, although Mayor Devir acknowledged defeat as the counting neared its end.

CHELSEA

Mayor Edward J. Voke was hard pushed by Sen. Bernard J. Sullivan but emerged victor by 1912 votes. The vote was Voke, 8462; Sullivan, 6550.

The vote was one of the heaviest for an off-year election in many years.

On all but one of the seven referenda questions on the ballot, negative answers were returned. The lone winner was City Treasurer and Tax Collector George F. Henderson whose position will now be placed under Civil Service. On this question a "Yes" answer was victor by 386 votes. On the second part of the question as to whether Henderson shall be continued in office after examination, the affirmative again won by 149 votes.

Questions on whether the city clerk and city physician shall be appointed by the mayor instead of the board of aldermen were defeated as were moves to place the offices of auditor, members of the board of assessors, city engineer, and clerk of committees under Civil Service.

HAVERHILL

A recount loomed today on the nomination of former Alderman Edward W. Peters by 14 votes over former Rep. Charles H. Morrill for the fourth and last qualifying place in the council race.

Alderman George F. Ramsey, seeking re-election, polled the highest council vote of 4244. Thomas L. Wood, son of the former mayor, received 3891 votes, Alderman Thomas J. Conlon was third with 2891, and Peters had 2647.

QUINCY

Two incumbents, William W. Jeness in Ward 1 and Christian A. Burkhard in Ward 4, led their respective wards for nomination to the City Council in the lightest vote on record in Quincy. Only 15 per cent of the total votes was cast.

The vote was as follows:

NEWBURYPORT

Former Mayor "Bossy" Andrew J. Gillis made a strong come-back in the four-man mayoral nomination fight, topped only by Mayor James F. Carens.

Mayor Carens polled 2488 votes against Gillis' 1695. Bossy who is the only man to serve as Newburyport mayor for three terms is in his seventh campaign.

Fred W. Chase, president of the Newburyport Retail Merchants' Association, and Edward B. Hoyt, former city councilor, were eliminated in the mayoralty contest.

LEADS—Film starlet Lana Turner was leading all contestants today in the fight for the title: "College Boys' Delight." She's being swamped with invitations to attend college affairs.

COFFEY LEADS IN RECOUNT

Rep. Susan K. Donovan of East Boston, who earlier had seen her three-vote lead over Rep. James S. Coffey for city councilor increased to 13 in a recount of the first nine precincts of Ward 1, today suffered an abrupt reversal in the 10th precinct, to give Coffey a temporary lead of 20 votes, with 12 more precincts to check.

Errors in tabulation, it was declared, had credited Coffey with 26 fewer votes than he was entitled to, while his adversary had been credited with seven more than she actually received.

The result was a net gain of 33 votes for Coffey, wiping out the deficit of 13 and placing him 20 in the lead.

Recounts were made in five other ward contests.

In Ward 8, Roxbury, where William E. Hurley defeated Councilor George F. McMahon by 116 votes, the completed recount gave Hurley a margin of 108 votes.

Rep. George Leary, runner-up in the Ward 3 contest in which Joseph Russo was victor with a lead of 590 votes, gained 102 votes in a recount of eight of the nine precincts.

In Ward 9, Roxbury, Daniel F. Sullivan, victor in the election by 800 votes, gained an additional 150 votes in the recount of nine out of 15 precincts.

No substantial change was reported in recounts of the vote in Ward 18, Hyde Park and Ward 14, Dorchester.

In the Hyde Park contest James J. Goode led the field by over 700 votes in the contest for the Council seat of Clement A. Norton, who was elected to the School Committee, while in Dorchester Councilor Sidney Rosenberg trailed 300 votes behind Joseph J. Gottlieb.

'Ay Tank Ay Marry Now'

ENGAGED at last, after various substantiated and unsubstantiated rumors, is Greta Garbo, "silent one" of the screen. She's wearing a diamond ring on the conventional engagement finger and the man who placed it there is Gaylord Hauser, food specialist and diet consultant.

International News Photo

Gaylord Hauser, Garbo Reported Engaged

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor International News Service

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 15 (INS)—Greta Garbo is wearing a new diamond ring—and on the proper finger. It was placed there by Gaylord Hauser, food specialist and diet consultant who is reported to have given the Duke and Duchess of Windsor their diet of spinach and garlic juice.

Gaylord Hauser

Hauser flew to Hollywood from Portland, Ore., spent two hours with the Swedish enigma and flew back to Seattle, where he is scheduled to lecture on how to be beautiful on fruit and vegetable juices. When this story came to me by telephone between shows, I couldn't wait to get it down on paper.

When I first mentioned that Garbo and Leopold Stokowski were cooling, and that she was seeing Hauser every day, a number of denials were printed. Whatever happened between her and Stokowski, no one knows, for Garbo is close-mouthed, even with her friends; but after she and "Stokie" came back from Sweden, their idyllic friendship apparently faded to something less romantic, although they remained on good terms.

Shortly afterward she met Hauser, and almost at once they became inseparable. He accompanied her to fashion shows, to motor exhibits, and occasionally she paid him a visit to his home atop Angelo Drive in Beverly Hills.

Garbo has been practically at the altar on at least two occasions and at the last minute changed her mind. There was the historic time Jack Gilbert drove her to the courthouse in Santa Ana and as he opened the car door to help her out, she said "Ay tank ay go home and not get married today."

All of Jack's charm and persuasion were of no avail. She made up her mind and that was all there was to it.

The same thing was reported to have happened with Stokowski. Several times in Italy they were on the verge of marrying, but at the last moment she always changed her mind.

However, they say the third time is a charm and you'll admit this is the very first time that Garbo has worn an engagement ring.

Girl Stretching, Bumping Self Into U. S. Air Corps

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 15 (AP)—The red-haired, 19-year-old Irish miss breezed right through her physical examination for Uncle Sam's flying course.

Breezed right through everything, that is, except the requirement that she be 5 feet, 2 inches tall. Kathleen Hildebrand, Kansas City junior college student, was a bare 5-1.

She wrote Uncle Sam. One of Uncle Sam's nephews in the civil aeronautics authority said sure, Kathleen could take the preliminary ground instruction but she'd have to gain that other inch or she couldn't get any altitude in his training planes.

That was three weeks ago.

So Kathless began to s-t-r-e-t-c-h. She just could reach the top of the doors in her home. So she grasped them and stretched—and stretched some more. Every morning before school. Every afternoon. Every night.

Kathleen went back to the examining physician, Dr. Paul C. Platt. She'd gained half an inch.

"Go stretch some more," he beamed. "Young lady, with a spirit like that I think you can make it."

Kathleen s-t-r-e-t-c-h-e-d and s-t-r-e-t-c-h-e-d.

She went back yesterday. Dr. Platt touched her head with his measuring standard.

"Ouch!" exclaimed Kathleen.

Dr. Platt took a look.

"A goose egg," he diagnosed.

"I bumped my head against the wall," Kathleen grinned. "I thought a good goose egg would add a little to my height."

It, or the stretching, had—but only a quarter-inch.

A lenient CAA official gave Kathleen until the end of the week to acquire a bigger goose egg or stretch another quarter-inch.

Speed Drive For Red Cross

"Motor Corps Day" today speeded up Boston's Red Cross roll call with the largest team of workers in the United States sent out from the Hotel Statler enrollment canteen.

Already enrolled 100 per cent are 35 Boston business firms and their employes. Subscriptions total $32,500 from 2350 members, Lawrence Coolidge, chairman of the roll call, announced. The goal is 100,000 members by Massachusetts Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 30.

KISSES FOR PETE, THE BARMAN

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 15 (AP)—The name of Pete Bedwell, bartender at the swank desert resort of Palm Springs, continued to figure today in the divorce trial of the Rodney Pantages.

The son of the late theater magnate, Alexander Pantages, accuses his wife, Beatrice Veryl, of associating with Bedwell in his (Pantages') absence. Monday Private Detective George Kilman testified he and Pantages broke into an upstairs bedroom in the latter's home May 1, to find Bedwell dressing and Mrs. Pantages in bed.

Mrs. Louise Thomas, who attended Mrs. Pantages at her wedding, brought up Bedwell's name again yesterday.

"Mrs. Pantages told me she had a lot of fun with people like Pete," she declared.

She added Mrs. Pantages told her:

"I don't love my husband any more—he doesn't appeal to me—and I suppose he is going out with other women.

"Mrs. Pantages told me Bedwell went to her apartment drunk one night and spent the night there."

Asked by C. B. Conlin of the defense if she hadn't made a "date" with another bartender to attend a Palm Springs steak bake, Mrs. Thomas replied frigidly:

"I don't associate with bartenders!"

Edward Jirak, a Palm Springs barber, testified:

"Once I saw Pete kiss Mrs. Pantages on the veranda."

AUTOIST HURT IN 50-FT. DIVE

A Somerville man was critically injured today when his sedan caromed off two trucks on the Prison Point bridge 50 yards from the Charlestown prison, then plunged through the wooden fence on the bridge to the railroad tracks 50 feet below.

Rushed to Massachusetts General Hospital after he had been extricated from the wreckage by police was George J. Moccaldi, 26, formerly of Pinckney st., who was moving today, police said, to an address in Florence st., both in Somerville.

Doctors at the hospital said Moccaldi's face and scalp were severely lacerated and that he had suffered possible fractures of the nose and skull.

Herman Smith, of Morrison ave., Somerville, said by police to have been driving one of the trucks in collision with Moccaldi's car, told police the accident happened when Moccaldi pulled out and tried to pass the truck.

The driver of the other truck, Fred L. Smith, of Sidney st., Cambridge, was quoted by police as saying he pulled over to give Moccaldi room, but the sedan grazed one truck, swung into the other and caromed o ut of control, through the bridge rail.

Traffic was tied up on the bridge for more than half an hour, while police cleared the wreckage.

Seize Capone Aides In O'Hare Slaying

CHICAGO, Nov. 15 (AP)—Investigators of the slaying of Edward J. O'Hare, wealthy turfman, held for questioning today five men seized in a midnight raid on the Paddock Club in suburban Cicero, once the principal domain of the Al Capone mob.

Lieut. Thomas Kelly and two squads of state's attorney's police visited the club not long after Prosecutor Thomas J. Courtney ordered a roundup of all Capone hoodlums for questioning in the O'Hare case.

Twenty patrons were being entertained by musicians when the squads arrived at the club, which includes a cocktail bar and rear room and an office. Lieut. Kelly said he went there to "look the place over for angles on the O'Hare case."

He said they found a couple of pistols and a record book which will be examined. He described three of the men seized as collectors for a slot machine syndicate.

The other two were described as exercise boys at Sportsman's Park, the race track which O'Hare headed and which is only a few blocks from the Paddock Club.

State's Atty. Courtney said he was trying to determine whether O'Hare had secret connections with Capone or remnants of the Capone gang, and, if so, whether the slaying last Wednesday was ordered by mobsmen because of a falling out between O'Hare and "the boys."

Among those questioned were Municipal Judge Eugene J. Holland and Johnny Patton, secretary-treasurer and largest stockholder of Sportsman's Park. Judge Holland said his connections with O'Hare were in a joint real estate venture.

MAINE MAN DYING IN HOTEL FIRE

A 47-year-old Maine man, son of a prominent Maine clergyman, was dying of burns and smoke inhalation at Boston City Hospital today after having been carried unconscious from a burning South End hotel room.

Police said the fire broke out in a room in the Milliner Hotel, Columbus ave., occupied by Phillip A. Clifford of Naples, Me., son of the Rev. Phillip Clifford of Portland.

Officers said Clifford rushed into the hotel an hour before the fire, his face badly cut, and told the clerk thugs had beaten and robbed him, then stolen his car.

The clerk's report of that incident was received at the Warren ave. station only a few moments after police had learned Clifford's car had crashed into a pole in Massachusetts ave. and a man ran from the scene.

A short while later the fire broke out in Clifford's room. While 150 screaming, excited people milled about the hotel corridors, Clifford was pulled from the blazing ruin of his room. His clothes were burned from his body and doctors held little hope for his recovery.

A photograph which appeared in yesterday's Boston Evening American led to identification of a "mystery girl" in Norwood hospital, police disclosed today.

The girl was identified by Miss Madeline Cahill, state parole officer, as Mrs. Hazel Knowles, 30, formerly of Attleboro, and was taken back to Bridgewater State hospital as a parole violator.

Mrs. Knowles had been discharged from the hospital on parole last May, officials said. She had told officials she was going to stay with a sister in Providence.

Yesterday she was picked up in a dazed condition near the Winslow tannery, Norwood.

Byrd Ship Sails As Woman Faints

With only half a dozen wives of the crew and a handful of newspapermen to bid them Godsped, the crew of the North Star, advance ship in the Byrd Antarctic expedition, cast off lines at the Army Base at 6:14 this morning on the first leg of the voyage into the frozen southland.

Mrs. Anthony Morency, one of the "girls they left behind," furnished the unexpected touch of drama by fainting as she kissed her husband goodbye.

She recovered, however, before the ship eased out of the dock and with tears streaming down her cheeks waved her farewell, until the ship vanished into the shadows.

The arctic motorship sailed quietly down the harbor with the first streak of dawn, marking the first Antarctic expedition sponsored by the United States government in 100 years.

On her decks were lashed the famed 27-ton snow cruiser and nearly 100 sled dogs, while below decks there was everything from food to phonograph records.

After a halt in the outer harbor to make compass adjustments, the North Star's next stop was to be Philadelphia to pick up some airplanes. After that she will head for Panama, then for New Zealand and finally for the expedition's west base in the Antarctic.

Next week, the second ship in the expedition, the barkentine Bear, will follow the North Star on the 12,000-mile journey. They expect to keep a rendezvous about New Year's Day before establishing the bases at which the explorers hope to live for about 13 months.

MAN SAVED IN FIRE, THEN STRICKEN

LOWELL, Nov. 15—Severin Belanger, 77, suffered a cerebral hemorrhage today shortly after he was rescued from his flame-swept home in Nichols st.

Belanger, sleeping in a downstairs room when fire from an overheated stove broke out in his cottage home, was rescued by police and firemen, and his wife, their daughter, Mrs. Yvonne Lacy, 32, and the latter's son, William, 7, were carried down ladders by firemen.

The aged man collapsed after he had been taken to a neighbor's home, and was conveyed to St. Joseph's Hospital, where his condition was pronounced critical.

Fire damage was estimated at $1000.

3D TERM PUT UP TO F. D. AGAIN

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15 (INS)—The third term issue was hurled anew at th White House today. Sen. Frederick Van Nuys (D.) of Indiana, declared his party and the nation are "entitled to know now" whether President Roosevelt is going to run again in 1940.

The Van Nuys challenge followed closely the announcement by Vice-President Garner's political managers that the Texan will seek the Democratic presidential nomination next year whether or not Mr. Roosevelt runs for a third term.

Apparently inspired by the third term declaration Former Senator William Gibbs McAdoo (D.) of California made in San Francisco Monday, the Van Nuys statement was made on the White House steps after a visit with the President.

The Indianan virtually echoed the demand recently made by the G. O. P. 1936 presidential nominee, Alf M. Landon of Kansas, that the President immediately disclose his 1940 ambitions. Landon said the third-term issue was non-partisan, affected both parties, nad would dominate all other issues if Mr. Roosevelt sought re-election in 1940.

New State Post To Greenough

Charles W. Greenough, 42, Boston broker, was approved as second assistant commissioner of the state department of mental health by Governor Saltonstall today.

Greenough, who will fill a new position created by the last session of the Legislature, was chosen by Dr. Clifton T. Perkins, head of the department. He is yet to be confirmed by the executive council.

The appointment is for four years at a salary of $5000 a year. The duties include the supervision of business and financial affairs of the department and the 16 institutions under its control.

Greenough attended Noble and Greenough school in Dedham and was graduated from Harvard in 1919. During 1917 and 1918 he served with the Naval Aviation Service overseas on submarine patrol duty.

He has been associated with the First of Boston Corporation and other Boston business firms, and lives in Dover. He is married and has two young daughters.

Parkhurst suffered a lacerated hand when he smashed a window to make his own escape.

Parade of Bad Boys Is Off

GLOUCESTER, Nov. 15—With a regretful explanation that he was just "trying to help the boys," City Marshal Winfred J. Ellis announced today, he was abandoning his plan to punish a group of boys blamed for a series of small robberies in the old Colonial "stocks and pillory" way.

"I didn't want to give the kids a criminal record," Ellis said today. "I wanted to help them. But everyone in the world has called me up, yelling about it. Everyone took it the wrong way. I'm going to forget the whole thing."

This city—indeed the whole State—was divided into two camps over Ellis' plan to parade the youngsters through downtown streets Saturday, dragging a two-wheeled cart loaded with their alleged loot.

Commissioner of Correction Arthur T. Lyman said he would not approve the plan "in any way" and Asst. Atty. Gen. Edward O. Proctor said the idea was contrary to the whole spirit of treatment of juvenile offenders; but Mrs. Frederick H. Works, president of the Gloucester Womens' Club, thought it "might be good punishment."

The young miscreants, from 8 to 12 years of age, were ta have been paraded to homes and stores where breaks have been made and return stolen articles to householders and merchants from whom they were stolen. There are seven or eight boys in the group, and their "haul" includes cigarettes, cigars, candy and money.

KELLY BLASTS BICKFORD IN BROADCASTING ROW

If Leland Bickford, radio commentator for the Yankee Network, ever needs a recommendation he better not count on former-Lieut. Gov. Francis E. Kelly.

For the former state office holder voiced his opinion of the well-known broadcaster in no uncertain terms at a Federal Radio Commission hearing on application of the Mayflower Broadcasting Co. for the wave length now used by WAAB.

"He doesn't use good English. "His speeches were written for him by scholars on the Republican State Committee.

"Nobody takes him very seriously."

The above quotations were some of the bon mots hurled at Bickford by Kelly, who testified concerning speeches made in the 1938 campaign over WAAB by Bickford.

It was over this station and WNAC, key station of the Yankee Network, and both Shepard owned, that Bickford made allegedly derogatory campaign speeches.

Under examination by James W. Gum, counsel for the Mayflower Corp., Kelly read from a speech purportedly made by Bickford prior to the gubernatorial primaries of 1938.

In this speech, Bickford urged the Democratic nomination of former Congressman Richard M. Russell and the defeat of Kelly, Curley and Hurley.

"No one takes Mr. Bickford very seriously," said Kelly. "His candidate, Mr. Russell, who was here got only 30,000 votes.' 'Mr. Bickford's opinion isn't worth much. He is a registered Republican and doesn't even vote in the Republican primaries.'

LIE HURLED IN DOWD PROBE; NIP JAIL BREAK

any time or place paid money to him Armstrong said

"I'll tell my story when I go upstairs."

Indrisano was the first witness called today, shortly after Dist Atty. Foley had been informed of the jail break scheme.

TOLD OF GUN PLOT

Guns were to have been smuggled in through certain guards and prisoners were to shoot their way to freedom.

A woman visitor was to have been employed to smuggle the guns in to jail, it was revealed.

Identity of the prisoners alleged to have been in on the plot is known. A "tip" to one of the jail guards foiled the plot, Foley was told.

Foley announced that he would call both Armstrong and Charles A. Hussey, city public works foreman, to his office for questioning. Hussey, too, was named as a co-conspirator with Dowd.

Indrisano flared in anger as he described Armstrong's alleged demand for money.

"He asked me to hand over $500," he said. "I told him, 'What do you think I am, a millionaire. I don't carry that kind of money with me.'"

8 FIRED BY SHERIFF

Indrisano said Armstrong had opened the conversation by asking him if he had seen the morning papers, which carried an account of eight dismissals by the sheriff.

Indrisano then described another alleged meeting with Armstrong.

As other witnesses waited for questioning, Deputy Sheriff John J. Casey, who was questioned by Bar Association investigators during their probe of the Dowd regime talked with Doyle.

"He says, 'Let me see, your name is Johnny, isn't it?'"

"I says, 'You take my money and then don't even know my name.'"

The association charged he had been forced to pay $2300 to Dowd, but Casey, it is said, refused to give an affidavit.

WOULDN'T AID INQUIRY

A number of employes, who, the association charged, refused to cooperate during its investigation, will be queried by the district attorney and his assistants.

It was learned today that a move for the discharge of a number of Dowd's assistants has been started.

As the district attorney, the Finance Commission and the city auditor speeded checkups on Dowd's activities as sheriff, federal agents were checking two angles.

Investigators have been informed that a dope peddler had free access to the jail, where open cells in both the men's and women's quarters were the rule, not the exception. Narcotic agents are checking.

Also an investigation was under way by income tax agents who are going over Dowd's tax returns and comparing reported income with income allegedly received.

STUBBORN BACKACHE

From Sluggish Kidneys

Bear this in mind—through the kidneys and bladder waste, poisons and harmful acids are expelled from the blood.

When kidneys are sluggish and bladder is thus irritated, improper kidney functioning may cause these poisonous acid substances to remain in the blood and affect the entire system. This unnatural condition ofttimes causes stubborn and persistent backache and in such a case a good time-tried diuretic and stimulant such as Gold Medal Haarlem Oil Capsules is called for—don't forget that statement was issued by the Governor's office explaining his choice.

The statement said that Sullivan had first come to the Governor's attention two years ago as a member of the speakers' bureau in the Community Federation, of which the present chief executive was general chairman.

Sullivan is 34 and for the past five years has been an insurance broker with offices in Federal st.

He is a second lieutenant in the Quartermaster Corps Reserve and is a member of the Elks and Knights of Columbus.

Early Mailings to Foreign Ports Urged

Early mailing of Christmas packages to transatlantic ports was urged today by Postmaster Peter F. Tague, because of the irregular sailings due to war conditions.

Packages bound for South America should be in the mails before Dec. 1 and for Panama, Bermuda, Haiti, Porto Rico, Newfoundland and Central American countries the deadline is Dec. 15.

Chiefs at Tobin Mystery Feast

The Suffolk County Democratic Associates gathered for luncheon with Mayor Tobi nat the Parker House today and decided to throw an air of mystery around the meeting.

Questioned about the luncheon—for which he paid the bill—Mayor Tobin told reporters:

"Oh, it's nothing important, fellows. We won't talk about anything interesting. See Tom Horgan."

Horgan, a former representative, is legislative agent of the city of Boston and arranged the lunch. Said Horgan:

"The meeting was called for the purpose of having a general talk on constructive things."

"Couldn't Republican legislators profitably be called into a general discussion of—constructive things?" he was asked.

He shook his head vehemently.

"Oh, no, boys," he said. "No Republicans. Just Democrats."

It was recalled that party leaders met last week and did not invite the mayor.

Claim One U-Boat Sank 26,000 Tons

BERLIN, Nov. 15 (AP)—Sinking of 26,000 tons of enemy shipping was credited by the German high command today to a Nazi submarine which returned to its base escorting an unidentified prize vessel.

This announcement was contained in a communique which noted sinking of a British destroyer by a German mine and destruction of a British freighter by an "explosion"—losses reported yesterday by the British admiralty.

There were "no special events" on the western front, said the communique, the text of which follows:

"In the west no special events except minor local artillery activity.

"The British admiralty announced loss of one destroyer which ran on a German mine. The English freighter Matra (8600 tons) was destroyed by an explosion.

"One of our U-boats sank 26,000 tons of shipping and brought in one prize vessel."

Finns Face Poles' Fate, Say Reds

MOSCOW, Nov. 15 (AP)—A suggestion that Finland may meet the same fate as Poland was made today in a cartoon appearing in the Communist newspaper Pravda.

The cartoon, a commentary on the recent breakdown of negotiations between Finland and Soviet Russia, pictured Polish Premier Wladyslaw Sikorski and former Foreign Minister Josef Beck entering a French hotel in tatters with the ruins of Poland behind them.

Sikorski was represented as saying:

"Let's wait for Erkko (Finnish Premier Elias Erkko); he's following in our footsteps."

West Front War Fought in Tunnels

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY ON THE WESTERN FRONT, Nov. 15—World War No. 2 is becoming strictly subterranean.

Every day that goes by makes the apparent deadlock on the Western Front more insuperable, and already it has reached a point where professional observers declare it incredible that an offensive could be successful without losses surpassing those of Verdun.

Most impressive was a visit today to the underground headquarters just being finished for one of the French army's innumerable staffs.

We walked sixty yards through a tunnel into the heart of a hill to find there soldiers digging away at the walls of a great hall big enough to accommodate 50 officers with everything necessary to a modern army staff.

The French army in the particular sector in which he visited this subterranean headquarters has already constructed over 200 of such staff shelters.

Camouflage in this war has reached perfection.

For example, we were wading ankle deep through sticky red mud a quarter of a mile when suddenly an officer cried, "Watch out!" and chuckled as I found myself staring into the muzzle of a huge 150-millimeter (about six-inch) gun which I had been unable to discern three feet away because it looked exactly like one of the trees.

With difficulty and only after they were pointed out, I finally counted battery after battery.

Time after time, our officer guide stopped the car and asked us to scan the hillside facing in the direction the enemy would be presumed to come and asked us if we "saw anything." My typical answer was "No, nothing," whereupon in short order our accompanying soldiers wrought wonders.

They leaped up the hill and grasped what had appeared to be a woodpile. It proved to have doors which, thrown aside, revealed a battery of anti-tank guns dominating the terrain for thousands of yards.

F. D.'s Aunt On Ship Out Of War Zone

NEW YORK, Nov. 15 (AP)—The United States Lines liner Manhattan arrived today from Southampton and Le Verlon, two days late because of head seas encountered all the way.

The 25,000-ton vessel, which cost $10,000,000 to build, will be tied up at her pier under terms of the neutrality legislation which bans American shipsf rom combat zones.

Among the passengers wts Mrs. Dora Delano Forbes, aunt of President Roosevelt. Mrs. Forbes, who has maintained a residence in Paris for 42 years, said:

"I just locked up my house, as I always do, hoping to go back soon."

he said that a nephew, Rene de Chrisaud, had been called to the French colors.

"It was hard to see young men going off to war," she remarked.

She described the morale of the French people as "very good" and added

"Hope for victory and intend to bring it about."

Mrs. Forbes said she did not want to leave French and waited until the last minute before booking passage on the Manhattan. She planned to leave New York immediately for her home in Newburgh, N. Y.

Frederickk H. Prince, Boston financier, and Mrs. Prince returned after three months on the Riviera and Biarritz.

"There is only one spirit in France," she said. "The country is united and Communism has been driven out.

"This is a war of materials," he added, "that is how we are going to play such an important part."

British Bomb Sub In Sea 'Holdup'

OPORTO, Portugal, Nov. 15 (AP) The story of a British depth bomb attack on a German submarine after it had forced a Norwegian freighter to hand over food supplies was told today by the master of the freighter.

Capt. Peter Sorensen of the 4706-ton freighter Jenny said the submarine halted his vessel on her way from Glasgow to Oporto.

Under threat of torpedoing, the skipper said, he delivered several bags of potatoes, dried fish, sugar and bread to the Germans.

A few minutes after the submarine submerged, he related, British warships appeared and dropped depth charges. Soon oil appeared on the surface, indicating the bombs reached their mark.

The First Hundred Yards are the Hardest

Your car may take more punishment in the first 100 yards of winter driving than in 100 miles of normal use. That costs you money. Let Jenney save it for you.

START your car in cold weather and the car has to warm up any ordinary lubricants before they can flow and protect the engine. That means bare metal is grinding and tearing at bare metal . . . cars wear out and driving is expensive.

Why pay those needless bills? Jenney winter grade Solvenoil* and gear lubricants need no warm-up period. The instant you start, they start, too—they are on the job to provide full protection, easy gear-shifting, full power right from the moment you step on the starter.

Jenney Solvenized* Gasoline has an extra winter value too. It is lubricated to protect valves, rings, cylinder walls—the very gasoline which starts your car, carries its own protective lubricant to save your motor. And Jenney Gasoline is Solvenized to chase carbon, improve compression, give you more mileage per gallon and lower cost per mile.

THANKS HEARST PAPERS

Mrs. N. F. Munson, chairman of the committee which organized the San Francisco council of the National Legion of Mothers of America, sent an open letter today to branches of the Legion throughout the country, thanking the Hearst newspapers for throwing open their columns to publicize the cause.

"The Hearst newspapers by their aid," said Mrs. Munson, "greatly facilitated our work. From my heart, I believe Mr. William Randolph Hearst, in sponsoring this movement originated by Mrs. Mary Ireland, Mrs. Frances Sherrill and Mrs. Mary M. Sheldon in Los Angeles, has shown the same foresight that his mother showed when she sponsored the child welfare movement in 1897.

"That older movement developed into the Parent Teacher Association, one of the largest organizations for good in the world today. We thank the Hearst newspapers, which we know, will stand firmly behind this movement to keep our sons out of European wars. We know that they will support our aim to work for peace and for love of our fellow man."

Mothers of large families who lost sons in the World War and who today have other sons of military age, and thousands of mothers whose sons are just arriving at service age, stress in their letters that they would take pride in giving their sons for the defense of the United States.

"AMERICA FIRST" is the battle cry of the Legion of Mothers.

Local organizers cite cases like Mrs. Nora G. Conley of 531 East Eighth st., South Boston, mother of eight boys, five of military age and a sixth on the threshold. Mrs. Conley's sturdy squad of sons are Thomas, 31; James, 29; John, 26; Walter, 23; Joseph, 20; Francis, 16; Edward, 14, and Paul, 11—a family to be proud of.

"Tories and politicians," said Mrs. Conley yesterday, "who think that we American mothers wouldn't give our sons in defense of America, don't know the mothers of this country. But offering them as pawn for countries in Europe who are fighting for dollars and land and not humanity, is a different proposition.

In addition to her own large family, Mrs. Conley cares for two nephews, who would soon be called for service—John J. Concannon, 19, and David, 17, whose father, John J. Concannon, died a victim of tuberculosis contracted while in the service in the World War.

Leaders among an active group of Mattapan mothers are Mrs. Mary Kennedy, 31 Osceola st.; Mrs. Alva Kinnear, 24 Friendship rd.; and Mrs. Olga Legg, 8 Friendship rd. Mrs. Kennedy and Mrs. Kinnear have sons of military age who, they say, will defend the United States "but never shoulder a gun to fight in Europe's mercenary war."

The slogans of the organization are:

1—To oppose the sending of American soldiers to fight on foreign soil.

2—To support a program of adequate national defense.

3—To combat all "isms" whose object is the destruction of the American form of government.

All women, married and unmarried, are eligible, without dues. Just sign pledge card or mail name and address without delay to Box 228, Boston, Mass.

Mothers! Sign Pledge on Editorial Page

STAUNCH supporters of the Legion of Mothers are, left to right, Mrs. Alva Kinnear, Mrs. Mary Kennedy and Mrs. Olga Legg, all of Mattapan. Mrs. Kinnear and Mrs. Kennedy have sons of military age who declare they will fight only in defense of U. S.

Cohan to Play Here Nov. 27

Playgoers who have known George M. Cohan only as an actor, author, composer, and producer may be interested to know that he was a columnist at one time for the publication for which he wrote as a theatrical trade journal known as "The Spot Light."

It was published by George M. Cohan, and its news consisted chiefly of information about the publisher.

Cohan will return to Boston, Nov. 27 at the Colonial Theater in the new Sidney Howard comedy, "Eadam, Will You Walk." The actor's engagement is limited to one week, prior to the New York premiere.

He published The Spot Light mainly for the amusement of his friends in the theatrical trade nevertheless, it served as a very shrewd method of publicizing his productions, and newspapers the country over republished his breezy comments on the backstage world which he lived.

Following are typical paragraphs from the Spot Light, which perhaps may help to explain the original popularity of Cohan with newspapermen and actors wherever he traveled:

"I saw Bernhardt. Gee, she's a fine gal."

"Mr. Erlanger has promised me that I'll never have to play Toledo."

"He carried on two running fights with the town of Toledo—to do with Providence, where he was born—which ended by establishing him as a particular favorite in both.)

'Disputed Passage' Has Premiere at The Met Tomorrow

Dorothy Lamour, Tamiroff Co-Star

Paramount's screen version of Lloyd C. Douglas' best selling noval, "Disputed Passage," will have its local premiere tomorrow at the Metropolitan Theater.

Featured on the same program will be Universal's "Hero For A Day," an exciting football romance, with Anita Louise, Dick Foran, and Charley Grapewin.

Top stars in "Disputed Passage" are Dorothy Lamour, Akim Tamiroff, and John Howard. Supporting the trio are Judith Barrett, William Collier, Sr., Gordon Jones, Keye Luke, and Billy Cook. Frank Borzage, who lists among his contributions to screen history such hits as 'Farewell To Arms,' "Seventh Heaven,' and "Three Comrades,' was in charge of direction.

"Disputed Passage" is the story of the conflict between two philosophies in medicine. One doctor, Akim Tamiroff, is the cold factual scientist, the other, John Howard, his pupil, respects the genius of his teacher, but misses something from his teachings—human feelings.

The teacher's mistake is brought home to him through a girl, Dorothy Lamour, and her vital love for the young man. Miss Lamour gets her first dramatic role as the American girl who because of her Oriental upbringing feels she is psychologically a Chinese. Tamiroff is said to give a truly magnificent performance in what is his greatest role.

What happens to sports celebrities after they graduate from college and campus glory is the theme of "Hero For a Day." The picture concerns itself with the efforts of a sports hero of 30 years ago to avert the disaster which threatens a strong-headed college star of today. Harold Young directed.

'Thunder Afloat' Being Held Over

"Thunder Afloat," with Wallace Beery and Chester Morris and "Fifth Avenue Girl," showing Ginger Rogers, are being held over through Friday at the Washington st. Olympia.

PAULETTE GODDARD and Bob Hope in new thriller, "Cat and the Canary," opening tomorrow at Paramount, Fenway.

'Cat and Canary' Thriller At Paramount and Fenway

The shivers-and-shudders Broadway thriller, "The Cat and the Canary," comes to the Paramount and Fenway screens tomorrow in Paramount's streamlined film version co-starring Bob Hope and Paulette Goddard.

On the same program will be "Heaven With a Barbed Wire Fence," Twentieth Century-Fox romance of a boy and girl hitchhiker.

Naturally with Hope in the featured picture, there is an assumption that comedy is an ingredient. Never doubt it, for Hope exchanges guns for gags so deftly that the picture is alternately gay and chilling.

It opens with Hope, Miss Goddard and four other potential heirs of one Cyrus Norman proceeding through Louisiana bayous to a deserted, lonely mansion. There they are to hear at midnight the reading of Norman's will. The only other persons present are the deceased's housekeeper, who has lived alone in the house for 10 years, and the lawyer who is to read the will.

As the will is being read, the lights dim and seven bells toll. The housekeeper predicts that of the eight persons present only seven will be alive in the morning.

When things have quieted down, Miss Goddard is named as the heiress. But there's a provision in the will.

She will remain the heiress only if she is not dead or insane within a month. And right from then on the hair-raising fun begins.

Others in the cast are John Beal, Douglass Montgomery, Gale Sondergaard, Elizabeth Patterson and George Zucco. Elliott Nugent directed.

PAUL MUNI WINS DESERVED ACCLAIM IN "KEY LARGO"

Maxwell Anderson Play Well Received at Colonial

By PEGGY DYLE

His talent untarnished, Paul Muni has returned to the stage from pictures in Maxwell Anderson's "Key Largo" and is currently receiving bravos from Colonial audiences.

Following a world premiere in Indianapolis, the Anderson play opened here Monday night and, before the final curtain, Paul Muni clearly demonstrated that he has brought back from Hollywood his great artistry unimpaired.

There are times when Mr. Anderson's fine play is not up to Mr. Muni's fine talent. Times when excess wordage gets in the way of this distinguished playwright's message and you find yourself questioning your own capacity to concentrate, if not to understand. But always there is Muni's arresting, haunted King McCloud to bring you to complete attention.

King McCloud, shining, young idealist, who has led his comrades into the Loyalist army and has lost his faith in mankind in Spain's gory civil war, is deserting when we first see him.

On a moonlit hill in a Spanish battlefield, he is counselling four surviving followers to do likewise. Death he says, is inevitable and "no cause is sacred when it's lost."

We next see King McCloud on a wharf on Key Largo, off Florida. Here in a shack live Alegre D'Alcala and her blind father, sister and father of Victor, one of those who preferred to die on the hill.

He confesses to them how he had left Victor and the other three to be trapped and slain by Franco's men while he ran away to outlive them and to be tormented by doubts that never desert him.

REDEEMS HIMSELF

Miserably earthbound, to live his miserable existence is all he wants. The loathsome Murillo, the killer-gambler who has cast lustful eyes on Alegre, has taken possession of the D'Alcala home. But King McCloud has said he is allergic to the whole human race and he makes no resistance.

And then, abruptly, love asserts itself and King McCloud truly becomes a king of men. He dies but he comes by his end valiantly, taking with him the craven killer and saving the lives of the two unfortunate Seminoles who were to have paid up for the murderous Murillo's crime.

He loses the lovely Alegre to win her eternally and he gains a father, for the senior D'Alcala proudly and beautifully claims him as his son, for the final curtain.

Paul Muni's cross-section of a soulless man, who discovers something to live for only to find it is worth dying for, is superb. It has a simplicity and power that unite igive us still another matchless ini portrayal.

iltogether, Maxwell Anderson's il Paul Muni's "Key Largo" is the Playwrights' Company lofty dition.

Hollywood Paragraphs

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 15 Just heard that Rowland Brown, who can write screen hits like few others, has signed a deal with Harry Cohn whereby he becomes a producer-director-writer.

I must say he has a hot idea lined up for his first production "back in France," which will reunite those two he-men, Victor McLaglen and Edmund Lowe. This new yarn of Brown's is described as a 1939 version of "What Price Glory" with Eddie and Vic resuming their old feud on the Maginot Line in the present war. The picture, which gets under way January 20, will be made on the Selznick lot and released through Columbia.

Can't say I envy Benny Bartlett his career of being a "second Mickey Rooney," for that young man is hard to live up to. But with the original copy breaking box office records every time it appears, Charles Rogers may be smart trying to fit his 13-year old player, who made a hit for himself in "Our Neighbors the Carters," into the Rooney shoes. Freckled-faced young Benny is just at the age Mickey was when he first attracted attention with his smart-aleck manner, and in many other ways the boys are alike. Benny, like Mickey, composes songs, plays lots of musical instruments and "hoofs" with the best of them. Imitations aren't usually successful, but maybe Benny can make us like it.

FIRING SQUAD AT DAWN

by PAUL WHELTON

SHE confronted the Boche when they invaded her home, heard them accuse her father of being a sniper—saw them lock him in the cellar and set fire to the home.

She was shot by a drunken, rioting German soldier; she saw a drunken Boche spit a tiny baby on his bayonet end and toss it into the arms of the agonized, screaming mother.

So Marthe Cnockaert of Westroosebeke, in Belgium, became a spy for the British in the World War, was eventually caught in a clever trap following an accident and was condemned to death before the firing squad at dawn.

Today the world hardly knows her as Mme. Marthe McKenna, wife of an Englishman with whom she lives in her native Belgian town—for her death sentence was commuted by the German commander-in-chief to life imprisonment and she was freed when Germany lost the war.

Weighed against the thousands of German soldiers she undoubtedly sent to their death were the German soldiers whom she helped to nurse—a service for which Germany, before she was trapped, awarded her the Iron Cross.

The Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty for Great Britain in the early part of the World War, later Secretary of State for War, and now again First Lord of the Admiralty, said of her:

"Dwelling behind the German lines, within sound of the cannon, she continually obtained and sent information of the highest importance to the British intelligence authorities.

"She reported the movement of troops; she destroyed, or endeavored to destroy, ammunition dumps; she assisted the escape of British prisoners; she directed the British aeroplanes where to strike at the billets, camps and assemblies of the German troops, and thus brought death upon hundreds of the enemies and oppressors of her country.

"In the meanwhile she worked in the German hospitals, rendering the merciful and tender service of a nurse to those upon whom, in another capacity, she sought to bring death and ruin."

It is early morning of a January day in 1915 and in the Belgian town of Roulers, occupied by Germans, two Belgian women hear the handle of their back door creak. They turn and watch in fascination and terror as the handle slowly, cautiously turns.

THEN, suddenly, the door opens, a bedraggled woman slides in and the door quickly closes. The first two women give little gasps of amazement and astonishment.

It is Lucelle Deldonck, whom they have not seen and whom they have given up for lost since that day in August when the grey-clad horde swept into Westroosebeke, pillaging, burning, murdering.

Lucelle Deldonck had been with Marthe Cnockaert and her mother and father, hiding in the Cnockaert cellar, when the Germans invaded the house. The women had been driven out, but Lucelle had become separated from the others and had not since been seen until this morning.

Now Lucelle heard with joy that Father Cnockaert had escaped from the burning cellar—but she was here on business and she swept back her bedraggled grey locks and her face grew grave.

"Your three sons are all safe, Mother Cnockaert," she said slowly. "They are with the army at Yser. Here are three letters."

Strangely crisp and business like was this old neighbor, the middle-aged woman who had thought to spend the rest of her days in peace and quiet in the sleepy Belgian village of Westroosebecke. She turned to the younger woman.

"Marthe, you are young and strong. Would you like to serve your country?"

For a moment Marthe Cnockaert did not grasp the significance of what her old neighbor had said. Then it came, and Marthe was filled with horror. The very word "spy" carried with it then the taint of something creepy and inhuman.

But her mother, wiser in her years, spoke up and said:

"If my daughter wishes to serve, I give her willingly and proudly, just as I have given my sons."

Less than half an hour later, fired now with zeal where at first she had known only horror, Marthe was enlisted and Lucelle Deldonck was at the door, opening it, peering out cautiously.

"I have just tramped 40 miles from Holland and I have a further 10 miles to go," she whispered. "Should the Germans know I was here it would mean . . ."

And then she was gone, and so completely a void had she left in that little room that it seemed almost as if she had never been there at all.

She had given no instructions. Marthe was to wait. She would get the word.

Two days later an old vegetable woman, called by the German soldiers "Canteen Ma," was at Marthe's door on the vegetable rounds when Marthe was leaving to go to the hospital. Quickly the crone slipped something into Marthe's hand and whispered

"Take a look at that in the sections of your bedroom."

WHILE a servant engaged the vegetable woman, the nurse hurried upstairs and opened the intricately-folded paper. It read:

"Come to the second farm on the right-hand side of the road to Zwevezeele. Ask for Lisette, who is expecting to see you at nine o'clock tonight."

Not without misgivings and trepidation did Marthe keep the appointment, but at the farmhouse she was taken by a man to a heavily-curtained room and there found Lucelle Deldonck.

She was given a code to learn and was told that through her nursing post at the hospital she was constantly in touch with soldiers of all ranks and had exceptional opportunities to learn of troop movements, locations of military formations, artillery concentrations and positions, supply dumps and numerous military activities.

The British wished that information. She was to give her reports to "No. 63" who would be found by going down the Rue de la Place until reaching the Grand Place, off which there was an alley. Marthe was to tap three times, pause; then tap twice on the fifth window on the left-hand side.

She was told that "safety-pin men," who wore two pins under their lapels as identification, might seek lodgings at her place for brief periods. They were special agents and were to be accommodated. She was warned against the "Berlin Vampires," as the counter-espionage men were called, and she was told to destroy the code as soon as she had learned it, and to memorize rather than write all messages except her report to "No. 63."

Her first information as a spy, and the results it brought, sent her to bed weeping, but then she thought of the thousands of her countrymen who had been slain in battle, of the aged priest digging his grave after being hastily condemned as a spy, of a woman who had hurled herself from a window when drunken soldiers had finished with her.

Marthe frequently accompanied details of wounded Germans to the Roulers railway station, from where they were sent to hospitals farther back, and she observed that on a different day each week ordnance trains were loading munitions for a 12-hour period.

If she only knew beforehand what the day appointed for that week was, she might give the information to "No. 63" in the alley off Grand Place, she considered.

Again on a sunny afternoon she watched the train bearing the wounded vanishing far up the track when a little round-faced officer old-aged her at the station, concluding that it was safe to leave patients to others and left the station.

Could she learn information out of this officer? No, it was too risky. He fired her a cigarette, but when she demurred declined to smoke in the open he invited her into his office, to a cigarette and tea.

They talked of the war and of trivial things, and finally he said.

"In Belgium I am lost. I am a widower, but in Hanover I have my two young daughters, and they mean much to me."

MARTHE thrilled, but not from pasaan, when he slid his pudgy hand, clammy with apparent nervousness, over hers as it lay on the desk.

"Yes," she replied. "War is terrible. The whole thing is so futile and so sad."

Not long after that he got around to asking for a date, and Marthe Cnockaert was not too strong with her denials. He whipped out a notebook to look over his assignments and see when he was free.

Peeping over his shoulder she read an entry for "Ordnance Train, Wed. 8 a.m. 3 p.m.; shells heavy, shells light; small arms."

"Friday afternoon and evening, Liebe Fraulein, would suit me very well," he said, snapping the book shut importantly. "I could get a special pass and we might run over to Ghent and spend a really nice evening."

They left it that way, but a nervous girl crept that night into the alley off Grand Place, rapped three times, then twice, on the window and passed in her note, giving the time when the ordnance train would be loading.

As she slipped back to the street, the guns of Ypres were grumbling and on the western horizon the rising lights of Very shells flickered.

On the next day came a shock when a military policeman called at her lodgings and said he had orders to take the Fraulein Cnockaert to headquarters in Roulers "for questioning."

Quaking with fear she dressed but she had regained some of her poise by the time they started away. Had they caught up with her? Had she been followed?

But it was a false alarm. They wished to know, merely as an old friend, if she had seen Lucelle Deldonck recently, as they had information, they said, that Lucelle had been in the vicinity.

Marthe pretended elation over learning that her old neighbor was alive. She explained the disappearance at Westroosebecke and insisted this now was the first word she had heard of Lucelle. The German Intelligence men were satisfied and returned her home, pressing her work at the hospital.

On Tuesday night Marthe tossed fitfully in bed, wondering if the information she had passed on to the British relative to the munitions train would prove correct; wondering, indeed, if the British had received the message; wondering if anything would be done about it."

She fell asleep at last, despite her determination not to do so, and was awakened in the early morning by her mother, who was shaking her and imploring her to hurry to the cellar because bombardment planes were about.

Outside was a din of anti-aircraft guns and at intervals could be heard the roaring of motors. Searchlights knifed through the blackness. There came a terrific detonation. It appeared to be near the railway station

SHIVERING with excitement, a cloak thrown over her nightgown, Marthe Cnockaert stood in her doorway, watching the searching rays, and as she watched she saw a lone white speck high up in the lights suddenly plunge down the beam, like a mote caught in a filtered shaft of sunlight.

Down, down the plane dived, while guns of the Germans on the ground set up a racket. The machine had been hit and was out of control was Marthe's first thought, but just as it seemed the machine must plunge with terrific force into the housetops it flattened out and something fell along the line of its former course.

Almost instantly there was an explosion, followed a split second later by a deafening roar and a concussion that even Marthe and her mother felt at this distance from the depot. That last bomb had struck either the train or the ammunition being loaded into it.

Later that day Marthe found the station and the area surrounding it a shambles. Scores of Germans had been killed, the ammunition dump and the train, station and roadbed wiped out for hundreds of feet.

There was no necessity for her to keep her date on Friday with the pudgy little German officer of the amorous intent.

In her bed that night Marthe wept, but she drove away the thoughts of the terrible damage her little note had caused by thinking of the losses and the terrors inflicted upon her own side. Thereafter she was to follow the same mental procedure whenever she felt conscience-stricken. It was war!

Not long afterward she volunteered for emergency duty in an advanced dressing station, directly behind the German lines, and labored there in blood and filth and stench until relieved.

It was here, because of the presence of an English Tommy and a kilted Scot, both wounded and brought in with the German injured and dying, that she conceived a plan for aiding in the escape of allied wounded to Holland, only a short distance away.

In March her father had an opportunity to take over the Carillon Cafe on the Grand Place in Roulers, and this his daughter urged him to do, realizing that men sometimes disclosed secrets over their liquor.

After work at the hospital she helped in the cafe during the evening and came to be friendly with a Lieut. Otto von Promft, one of three officers billeted in rooms above the cafe.

It was after their arrival that she assisted the injured English Tommy and the Scot to escape from the hospital in Roulers, to where they had been removed. Out of her own money she gave them 1000 francs and directed them to slip over to a Belgian cait while they were walking in the grounds. The Belgian drove them away, under cover, and turned them over to another agent, who smuggled them into Holland.

Hardly had this taken place when two civilian workers at the hospital revealed themselves as "safety pin men," showing the two safety pins placed at a diagonal beneath their lapels, and told her they were now to take orders from "Laura," under which name she signed her reports.

ALSO the civilian employes warned her that Von Promft was a member of the German counter espionage group and had been billeted at her father's cafe to watch for spies

"And I have some unusual information for you, sister," said one of the spies. "Yesterday afternoon, when I should normally have been off duty, I and another ambulance driver were sent on several trips to and from the station, bringing great bales of cotton-wool swabs to the hospital store.

"These were not dressing pads for wounds, as they had pieces of elastic fixed to them. I have never seen anything like them before."

The spy said they were not addressed to the hospital commander, but to A Hauptmann Reichmann. Marthe started, for one of the three mysterious Germans billeted at the cafe was a Hauptmann (Captain) Reichmann.

The other civilian employe at the hospital also had some information for her, although he did not know if it was important. Part of the last shipment on the ammunition train, he said, had consisted of long metal cylinders and even the Germans at the station did not appear to know what they were

"Whatever they are," he commented, "I think perhaps a bomb would do them a bit of good."

Marthe thought so, too, and she incorporated the cylinders and the strange cotton-wool swabs in her report, which already carried reference to strange charts on wind directions in the sector, that her mother had reported Hauptmann Reichmann was keeping in his room.

Before she left the report in the alley off Grand Place she also included a conversation she had had in the cafe with Lieut. Otto von Promft while he was in his cups. His drunken ramblings gave her his:

"Here I am, Carl Sturme, despised chemist, a man these snobs of generals with their choker collars and their eyeglasses would in the old days have regarded with as much respect as they did the paving-stones under their feet, but who is now going to play a bigger hand in winning the mightiest war the world has ever known than they themselves, for all their swaggering militarism."

She sent the report, and when Aiphonse, one of the civilian employes, later told her he had

Hunt Victim Of Bridge Collapse

By DOROTHY LAUGHLIN

WESLACO, Tex., Nov. 15—Texas Rangers today are searching in the muddy waters of the Rio Grande for the body of a man, lost when the Mexican side of the International Bridge, near here, collapsed. Five other persons were injured and one is believed missing.

Rusty cables on the Reynosa, Mex., side of the bridge gave way when they broke under the weight of traffic. The structure dropped 30 feet into the river.

The first collapse was followed later by the crash of the whole structure as workmen sought to make temporary repairs. None was hurt.

THE AMERICAN RED CROSS drive, conducted throughout the country from now until November 30, interests not only those millions of men and women to whom this great organization has been "a friend in need" in every emergency, but also the millions of more fortunate men and women who believe in sharing and helping the poor and distressed.

RED CROSS AIDE
Heed Her Appeal

Eighty years ago the Red Cross was founded. It was born the day Henri Dunant, Swiss banker, visited the battlefield of Solferino, where the Austrians under Emperor Francis Joseph were fighting the French and Italians under Napoleon III in one of Europe's innumerable periodic wars.

Dunant beheld more than 40,000 dying in agony on the blood-drenched ground. He heard their screams and curses and prayers for quick relief from the torture of broken limbs and torn bodies. And he never forgot.

Horrified, nauseated and angered by what he had seen, Dunaat spent his entire fortune in a successful attempt to open the world's eyes to the TRUTH ABOUT WAR and the tragedy of ignored suffering.

When, a few years later, 12 nations sent representatives to Dunant's country they honored his work by making the Swiss flag, with colors reversed, the international symbol of the Red Cross.

Today, the groans of the dying are heard again in Europe. Four score years have failed to enlighten governments. But there is one important difference between today and 1859.

The difference is the Red Cross, which recognizing neither nationality nor creed, braves gunfire and shells to administer to the dying and to rescue the living.

In short, wherever humans suffer in natural or man-made disasters, the Red Cross stands for mercy amid misery.

Everyone who contributes to its support and enlists under its red and white banner enriches not only himself but all mankind.

"RELIGION INSPIRES ART; a spiritual motive is necessary if genius is to produce its masterpieces," says Professor Patrick Gavin in a lecture dedicated to Catholic Book Week.

Undoubtedly the Professor is thinking of the magnificent art of Michelangelo, Raphael, Da Vinci, Titian, Ghirlandajo and the many other great masters whose works were largely encouraged by ecclesiastical patronage.

Undoubtedly, too, he is contrasting their sublime and dignified achievements with the daubs and inane vacuities of "modernists" who frequently take devilish delight in ridiculing the Creator by distorting everything they vainly seek to depict.

Anyone who makes that comparison cannot fail to agree with Professor Gavin.

THE JOLLY ROGER, a "pirate" flag with background and white skull and cross bones, will fly from police stations' flagstaffs if Commissioner Timilty's plan becomes reality.

The grim emblem would remind all residents and particularly motorists that a fatal automobile accident had occurred in the district during the preceding 24 hours.

If the novel experiment justifies its sponsor's hopes it will indeed be worth while. With 18 persons killed during the past week on Massachusetts highways and the mortality for the year threatening to exceed the 1938 total, law enforcement officers and agencies cannot afford to be lenient.

"THE HIGHEST FEE for the registration of an automobile is that required by the State of Vermont," declares the Public Roads Administration.

Vermonters pay $27.06 on the average to obtain plates for their pleasure cars and trucks. New Hampshire residents pay $21.80. And Massachusetts motorists only $8.01.

Few Bay State people will find much consolation in that information. Certainly not automobile owners who live in Chelsea, where, IN ADDITION TO THE $8.01, there is a COMPULSORY insurance bill of $70.90!

Not Always Gay

Gaiety in children may . . . be quite as free and voluntary . . . as a liquid bird-song gay . . . in a wooded sanctuary . . . Life at first is full of play.

But, with awakening from dreams . . . we are not always gay, it seems . . . Yet gaiety in us may be . . . a highly cultivated art . . . to cover up a broken heart . . . the badge of aristocracy.

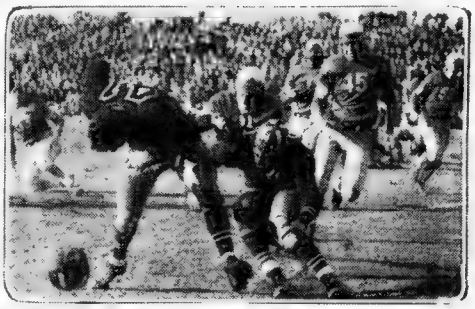
Human Side of News -:- By EDWIN C. HILL

UP TO 35 YEARS AGO, football was pretty much of a closed corporation, confined to the Ivy League colleges. The figures of the game as we played it were almost completely of Anglo-Saxon and Irish complexion, as indicated by the roster of pigskin booters of that day, with unvaried line-ups such as Robinson, Adams, Johnson, O'Brien, Wilson, Smith, Murphy, Williams, Scott, O'Connell and Franklin.

But the melting pot has been melting, and, simultaneously, football has come out of its corner, with all nations represented in the line-ups.

Back in the early days of Walter Camp, days of the last late blooming in the "flowering of New England," football was coached entirely with a broad A and a somewhat Yankee twang.



TOUCHDOWN BY MOUTENOT OF CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY!
All Nationalities, All Creeds Make Modern Football

JONES AND SMITH are easy names for the cheerleader and the bleachers. It is harder to get the full value out of "Nine rahs for Czwtndczyiskjnwau!" But that's the least of our troubles when the thus identified in the line-up snags a 30-yard pass and zig-zags like forked lightning through a barrage of catapulting bodies for a touchdown. No mere matter of jumbled consonants can dim his glory or pipe down our cheers. We manage somehow.

The "Know Nothing" movement of the middle of the last century, reviling "Foreigners," has been as thoroughly discredited and forgotten as will the various "ham and eggs" aberrations of this day.

While we found it necessary, in 1929, to set up immigration quotas, we did so with full realization of brawn and brains with which the foreign-born, or those of foreign parentage have paid the price of admission. We knew then, as now, that they were turning in a lot more than muscle.

From this year's lists of Phi Beta Kappa selections, taken around the country, you could make up a couple of All-America scholarship teams which would match football in foreign derivation. These youngsters who shine in athletics or scholarship, come like our own, from the factories and fields or perhaps from homes with generations of cultured ancestors.

The point is that we never go into that. We give them their nine rahs or their golden key on their merits. It doesn't happen anywhere else.

We hope to keep clear of any smug or pharisaical citations of American well-being as against other people's troubles, but certainly it is not a too-pious sentiment to note that our melting pot is melting and leaving no slag of unhappy or oppressed minorities.

This has been particularly noticeable as the European war creates new tensions and opens old cleavages throughout the world.

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt -:- MY DAY

NEW YORK, Nov. 15—How reluctantly I left the country! It was another beautiful day and all the way down in the train I could scarcely read the newspapers, it was so lovely out the window. There are still enough leaves on the trees to give some color to the landscape, but I think by next week it will probably all be gone.

The end of November is apt to be a dreary part of the year, but even then I love the sound of fallen leaves as I walk through the woods, and I can't help scuffling just as children do. There is a smell in the air of burned leaves and apples and cider which is very pleasant. I haven't had any fresh cider this year and I must try to get some the next time I am in the country.

I arrived in New York City in time to do several errands, go to the dentist and reach my apartment in time for lunch. This afternoon I have a number of appointments and tonight I go to Newark, N. J., for a lecture.

WHEN I was here with our son, James, last week, we went to see a most entertaining play. Anyone who has read Clarence Day's "Life With Father" would expect to have an amusing evening. Howard Lindsay and Russel Crouse have been most successful in creating the atmosphere best suited to "Father."

In the late 1880's men must have blustered a great deal and life for the ladies must have been difficult, for while they had their own way, they went through so much subterfuge to get it!

MRS. ROOSEVELT
Sees "Life With Father"

At heart, "Father" really was a mouse. I think his wife knew it, but she stuck to her pretense as did the children. I wonder how those children ever turned out as well as they did. The perfect scene between "Father" and Clarence is one where Father announces that he will tell his son "all about women," and then informs him promptly that there are certain subjects never discussed between gentlemen.

I suppose that appealed to me because, being brought up by my grandmother, I remember that atmosphere between generations very well. There were certain subjects never discussed by gentlemen old and young. There were also certain subjects never discussed by ladies of different ages and the result was frequently very bewildered young people when they found themselves faced with life.

I WAS GLAD to see this morning that a committee had been set up again, with Dr. Henry MacCracken as chairman, which will undertake relief work for the Poles. At first it will be largely among Polish refugees in other countries, and later it is hoped work may be done in Poland.

I hope that everyone who can will help this committee. It should inspire every confidence because of past experience in this work.

I was glad to see by the papers the other day that thought is being given to the very difficult situation in which our American seamen find themselves. Today I noted with interest the efforts which are being made to find new outlets for our shipping, difficult as this would seem to be.

Perhaps the war will create a shortage of shipping in the zones that are not closed to us.

MUSICAL ROLE FOR ILONA MASSEY

By Louella O. Parsons

Ilona Massey

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Nov. 15 Well, here I am in San Francisco getting ready for the big event in my life—Stage appearance at the Golden Gate Theater with my youthful pals, Jane Wyman Ronald Reagan, Arleen Whelan Susan Hayward and June Presser. In the midst of rehearsals a telephone call came from Hollywood this morning saying that "Countess Maritza," the charming musical which ran for 321 consecutive performances, had been bought by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for Ilona Massey. I am reliably informed that $25,000 was the price paid

While we are on the subject of "Countess Maritza," I just heard that "The Merry Widow" will probably be remade in a modern version. "The Chocolate Soldier," "The Merry Widow" waltz and all Franz Lehar's lovely music will never die. Wonder if you remember the fascinating silent movie with Mae Murray and John Gilbert and then later Jeanette MacDonald and Maurice Chevalier sang the unforgettable tunes in the talkie version.

Zorina gets back to the coast to start rehearsals on "European Plan' which is now titled, "I Was An Adventuress". Alexander Woollcott is due in Hollywood Dec. 1—but not to talk any movie plans. He'll visit his old friend, Ruth Gordon; the "Virginia City" troupe can't stand much more. Errol Flynn has a broken finger.

MARY PICKFORD, whose career in motion pictures has never been equalled by any other woman in the world, has retired. She says she will let nothing interfere with her happiness with Buddy Rogers, and she feels the most important thing in the world is not to remain away from him too long. She came out to Marsons farm for luncheon on Sunday and while we were rehearsing for the personal appearance tour she picked radishes to send to Buddy who is still on tour. And good radishes they were, too, if I do say so as shouldn't. Bet I'll be thinking of them and all the other things growing in sunny California in November when I am in the cold region

DAILY STORY 'Conscience Fund'

WHEN I WAS 20 I married a prosperous lawyer from another state, who was the brother of a college classmate. Ours was a whirlwind courtship, a brilliant wedding and a wonderful honeymoon, then "at home" in a lovely new house in one of Boston's finest suburbs.

I never once had occasion to worry over finances because he gave me a generous allowance and I, in turn, never questioned him about his financial affairs, feeling that he would confide in me if he wished me to know anything about his business.

THEN ONE DAY while gathering up some clothes to send to the cleaner I pulled out a letter written obviously in a woman's hand, as I looked into his pockets to see if he had left anything of value in them.

I tried to put it out of my mind, telling myself that Bob would have an explanation; but suspicion nagged at me until I could bear it no longer.

It was signed "Vera" and postmarked from a small town in another state. It was a friendly letter, full of gratitude for Bob's generosity, and told in detail how much his check had meant to her and, "Bobby."

The sudden realization that I had a rival filled me with blind, unreasoning fury, and without waiting for an explanation, I packed up and left.

I ENGAGED a lawyer to sue for a separation and alimony. This gentleman, it turned out, believed in trying to save a marriage before he tried to sever it, and, unknown to me, arranged for Bob to meet me in his office, in the hope of effecting a reconciliation.

And for this I shall thank him as long as I live, for I learned, beyond all doubt, that Vera was a little "nobody" whom his scapegrace brother had married and deserted. The marriage had been annulled at the demand of his family, and Bob had acted for his brother.

When he learned there was to be a child, he had felt it his duty to help the unfortunate girl. In fact, it was a sort of "conscience fund," and to save explanations and possible friction with his family, he had kept the matter to himself.

Can you write a "triangle" story? Send it to Daily Story Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop Square, Boston. Five dollars will be paid for the week's best contribution. If you wish story returned, enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope.

LISTEN, WORLD! By Elsie Robinson

LOOK OUT FOR PITY! Beware of giving it or taking it, for the payoff is always a pain in the neck.

Sounds like heresy? Yes—but that's because we confuse pity with sympathy, which is a noble and necessary attribute — whereas pity is either an insult or a racket, with each side trying to beat the other to the punch.

Pity's a bad risk in any human relationship, but never as harmful as when used as a foundation for marriage.

How can the warmth of simple affection possibly compete with the thrill of saving Romantic Roland from the Demon Rum . . . or of rescuing Trembling Tilly from her Fiendish Family . . . or of proving to an amazed world that Frustrated Freddie was a genius all along, only nobody ever understood him but YOU?

A MARVELOUS IDEA—at first. But not quite so hot when you discover that Frustration is Freddie's pet racket . . . and nothing short of dynamite can cure Roland of his hiccoughs . . . and being A Martyr is Tilly's favorite indoor sport.

But, chances are, being a decent soul, you can't believe it—even though you've felt disillusionment creeping over you, following your own sentimental experiment . . . disillusionment that is gradually deepening to disgust, revulsion, hate!

"But how can I hate anyone who's so helpless?" you wail as millions have done before you. Yet the answer's plain:

You hate the helpless one—and he hates you in return because all Nature is backing you in that hatred. People weren't meant to give—or accept—pity. People were meant to grow—and pity keeps them from growing. People were meant to have self-respect, which is another form of growth and pity violates self-respect. No self-respecting person will long accept pity—or needs to. However great our burden, there is always the power within us to rise above our handicap and command admiration and respect. But we cannot rise as long as we either give or accept pity — FOR THEY BOTH MAKE A RACKET OF FAILURE.

THERE'S ONLY ONE reason for helping anyone . . . liking anyone . . . marrying anyone . . . and that is mutual respect and affection, mutual need. IF YOU CAN'T RESPECT THE OTHER FELLOW, LEAVE HIM ALONE.

Sympathize and accept sympathy. Love and accept love. They both contribute to life. But never pity or accept pity—for it only contributes to death.

PREDICT RECORD CHRISTMAS TRADE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15 (INS)—Improved economic conditions throughout the country prompted government business forecasters to predict a Christmas trade boom that will rival pre-depression years.

Indications of the trend already are apparent to the experts. In addition, they cited that both shoppers and merchants will have a four-week pre-Christmas shopping period, instead of the usual three weeks.

The longer shopping period was brought about by President Roosevelt's advancement of Thanksgiving Day from the usual last Thursday in November to Nov. 23.

Government economists said this would start the Christmas buying in a big way on Nov. 25 every month before Christmas, and would increase the volume of trade by hundreds of millions of dollars.

Factors that prompted the prediction of a big Christmas trade boom were cited as follows:

Employment in industry and commerce has increased by 1,000,000 over the corresponding period of last year.

Payrolls are larger than they have been in many years.

Corporations are showing good profits in many years, many form of dividends.

Federal receipts from excise levies are far ahead of last year, indicating liberal buying of luxuries and non-essentials.

Steel plants are operating near capacity.

Railroads are enjoying the biggest traffic since the depression, except for short periods.

Department store sales throughout the country now are running from 10 to 20 per cent above the volume a year ago. Buying in wholesale markets for the Christmas trade is reported heavy in virtually all lines, including luxuries.

While the government experts admitted there will be little buying of Christmas yachts, there will be plenty of purchases of automobiles, furs, radios, furniture and similar goods, they said.

Hoffman Makes Plea for Free U. S. Enterprise

CHICAGO, Nov. 15 (INS)—President Paul G. Hoffman of the Studebaker Corp. today issued a call for a drive by every segment of American life labor, industry, capital, agriculture and government—to insure not only a higher standard of living through wise utilization of the nation's economic blessings, but also the preservation of non-regimented democracy in the United States.

"There is no danger of a blackout of freedom in America," Hoffman told the annual meeting of the American Petroleum Institute. But, he added:

"I do believe that there is danger of a fadeout as a result of certain pressures which threaten free enterprise."

Specifically, Hoffman recommended:

(1) Reduction of governmental expenditures by pruning the wasteful revenue derived from taxes.

(2) Boosting the national income to at least $100,000,000,000 in the next decade—by improving manufactured goods while seeking lowered sales price.

(3) Joint labor-management efforts to liberalize the minimum wage provision of the wage and hour act.

(4) Recognition by business of the government's role as policeman to insure fair competition, but resistance to any effort at government control.

5. Recognition that business itself has a whale of a job of housecleaning before we can assert our right to leadership in this battle to save free enterprise."

"Those of us who believe in free competition," Hoffman said, "must not only practice it but, in addition, must train our guns against those who seek a shortcut to profit by inviting legislative restrictions on competition.

"We must intensify our efforts to expand volume by doing the best job we have ever done in history for our lord and master—the American customer. If we so dedicate ourselves we can, with justification, hope that agriculture will abandon its doctrine of scarcity, and labor its philosophy of high hourly rates and less work, and join with us in a determined effort to provide that more abundant life.

"This is the appointed hour for action."

Regarding taxation and governmental expenditures, Hoffman said that in 1913 all taxes constituted 7 per cent of the national income while in 1938, with the national income only double that of 1913, total governmental expenditures plus contingent and credit liabilities represented 33 per cent of the national income.

Seek Speed In Television

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15 (INS)—The federal government stepped into the vague television scene and, through a special committee of the federal communications commission, urged that barriers to the advancement of the science and its industry be quickly removed.

Listing 10 recommendations which may prove historic in the evolution of the fledgling industry the special committee asked that existing federal regulations governing television be broadly liberalized to stimulate its advancement in this country.

The public interest in television is lagging, and must be increased, the committee declared, estimating there are less than 1,000 receiving sets in private operation. In an exhaustive report, it declared the prospective industry is in a "crucial" position, still in its experimental stage, but predicted that country can emerge predominant in the field, over war-preoccupied Europe.

Cautious not to "build up public hopes," the committee reported that despite rapid progress achieved in television in the past six months, its facilities are not yet ready for the public on a large and sound scale.

Slow Advance Features Stock Market

NEW YORK, Nov. 15 (AP)—Important industrial issues moved upward cautiously today in a hesitant stock market.

Advances of as much as a point in dustries group as noon approached, were common in the "heavy" issues but transactions were small and slow.

Gainers included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Boeing, Glenn Martin, Anaconda, Westinghouse Electric, Santa Fe, duPont, Caterpillar and Sears Roebuck.

Goodrich was in demand following announcement of the company's first dividend on the common since September, 1937.

Final rejection by Germany of the peace proposals of the King of the Belgians and the Queen of the Netherlands left Wall Street rather cool toward the war situation, but ready, to a certain extent, to capitalize on the increasingly good corporate news at home.

Foreign markets were firm but quiet. Bonds tended upward and commodities were mixed.

Observers noted the assertion of Iron Age that pressure from steel consumers for delivery "provides strong evidence" that much of the production of the industry is quickly passing into finished products and that "inventories of most consumers still are far below normal."

So far, the periodical said, the industry is unable to detect signs of a backing up of the flow of steel from the mills to the ultimate consumer. Most companies in the last ten days, it declared, have made no progress in reducing backlogs.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15 (INS)—Noon stock exchange prices follow: General Motors 54⅝, off ⅛; Chrysler 88¼, up ⅜; U. S. Steel 70⅞, up ⅜; U. S. Gypsum 83½, unchanged; Bethlehem Steel, 81¼, up ⅞; Anaconda Copper 32½, up ⅜; Westinghouse Electric 112½, up 1½; Goodrich 20¾, up 1¼; United Aircraft 47¼, up ⅝; American Can 110½, off ⅜; Air Reduction 57⅜, off ⅜; du Pont 178½, up ½.

New Haven Seeks To Pay Interest

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Nov. 15 (AP)—Trustees of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, which is in the process of reorganization, asked the federal court today for permission to pay $3,465,533 in interest on bonds and debentures, secured by liens, of both the parent company and underlying companies. A hearing on the petition will be held Nov. 22.

The largest single sum the trustees asked to be allowed to pay was $2,363,678, the remaining unpaid half of the semi-annual installments of interest which fell due on outstanding bonds and debentures secured by the New Haven's first and refunding mortgage between Nov. 1, 1935, and April 1, 1936, inclusive.

BONUSES FOR 350

J. W. Wood, president of the J. W. Wood Elastic Web Company of Stoughton, announced to 350 employes today they would share in approximately $12,000 to be distributed December 1 and 2 as Christmas bonuses.

Auto Demand Exceeds Supply

The most colorful story on recovery is not told in terms of battleships made, machine guns ordered, airplanes shipped or cannon needed . . . It is a simple tale of a demand for new motor cars so brisk that manufacturers cannot keep dealers supplied with models for their showrooms . . .

ESSENTIALLY . . . The difference is one between destructive and constructive forces placed in operation by man . . . American trends, personified by auto output, are swayed by the ability to share in the good things of living . . And however much war talk psychologically speeded the upturn its tangible effects are puny in comparison with the natural lift of home industry . . . During October, production of cars and trucks in the U. S. reached 338,000 units . . . A 57 per cent increase over the like month of 1938 . . . A record made despite the enforced idleness of a major manufacturer.

UNDERNEATH . . . The bare figures on output is where the interesting story is found . . . For despite top speed production dealers have had to operate on with less than a two-weeks supply . . . And the correspondent of American Machinist in Detroit says that most dealers will shortly find themselves with only a week's supply of new models . . . And a goodly portion of these will be in transit between factory and showroom . . . No other evidence is required to prove motor cars are going directly in consumer hands . . .

MORE SPECTACULAR . . . Stories testifying to the brisk demand for automobiles are contained in current delivery terms . . . One of the big three quotes two to four weeks . . . another's range up to five weeks . . . while one maker's dealers are said to be pleading with customers to allow their cars to be placed on exhibition . . . The latter because so many prospects have not even seen a 1940 model . . . Better medium grade cars feature the inability of one to promise outlet delivery before February or March . . .

STOCK PRICE . . . Trends for weeks have been minor affairs . . . Nothing remotely resembling a rise or move has taken place . . . Occasionally an attempt to convert a minor rally or decline into something more important has been made . . . At present something akin to such an effort is taking place on the upside . . . How it will fare is the question anxiously asked by traders sickened by inaction . . . But most know that unless it is accompanied by a top news development it may prove another "bust" . . .

NOTEBOOK . . . Down for future attention is Eastern Steamship . . . Those nine months earnings warrant it . . . Add war then and now comparisons . . . 25 years ago this week gross earnings of U. S. railroads were showing tremendous shrinkage . . . while today they are showing tremendous enlargement . . . International Paper is said to be earning at the rate of $2.80 per common share so far in this quarter . . . Which makes the stock one of the attractive low priced possibilities to remember for the next upswing . . .

BEDROOM BRIEFS . . . International Harvester's good recent tape action has the analysts confused . . . They estimate earnings for this year at $2 a share . . . And after calculating 1940 sales at not more than 20 per cent above this year they doubt the issue's attractiveness above 60 . . . Late war business is the only thing that would change the picture for them . . . An ever-present possibility perhaps but difficult to foresee with war at the sit-down stage . . .

J. A. P., Boston—Otis Steel is running at a good rate . . . But first half losses plus booking of current orders at low prices are believed to militate against anything other than an even earnings break for this year . . .

R. K. B., Cambridge—Yes, there was a lot of bullishness on Montgomery Ward a few weeks back . . . There still is for that matter . . . And it could do better in a general market rally . . . Our guess on this year's net is $4.75 a share . . .

L. A., Weston—Mention here of Colt was brief . . . But we think $7 a share this year possible . . . With 1940 witnessing a sharp increase . . . Latter thought based on U. S. armament orders plus uplift in domestic business.

Power Output

NEW YORK, Nov. 15 (AP)—Electric power production in the United States last week totaled 2,513,688,000 kilowatt hours, a drop of .9 of 1 per cent from the preceding week but 13.8 per cent ahead of the comparable 1938 week, the Edison Electric Institute reported today. New England gain was 14.3 per cent.

A BELGIAN WOMAN SPY CHEATS DEATH

Marthe Cnockaert Spared Firing Squad

learned from a man at the ammunition dump that the cylinders contained chlorine, she forwarded that, too.

Not realizing then, in common with her superiors, that Germany was on the point of employing the first gas attacks in the war, Marthe sent on the chlorine information nevertheless. Her reply from British Intelligence, delivered surreptitiously by "Canteen Ma," read tersely:

"Recent reports of yours of a highly speculative nature. Troop movements, designation of units, trains, etc., of more value."

THEN, on April 22, 1915, the breeze from the German trenches to the French and Canadian lines at Langemarck and about Poelcappele carried a horrible cloud with it.

Soon hundreds of agonized, screaming, gasping and choking men, their faces a sickly green, their uniforms shredded in their agonies, the brass buttons turned green, were being brought into Roulers.

So many were there that the hospital and corridors were filled to overflowing, the grounds were filled and the late-comers were laid in rows along the sidewalks of the village and in the streets themselves.

There were but few German soldiers in the group. The cotton swabs with the strings on them had been chemically-treated for German wear—the first crude gas masks.

In the autumn of 1915, Marthe received warning that German counter-espionage was tightening up and to proceed with caution. She did not heed the warning. Several spies had been arrested, among them a well-to-do man and his wife who frequented the cafe and whom even Marthe had not suspected of being spies.

The same night that she received the warning, Marthe had slipped into the alley off Grand Place with information about a new battalion, which had arrived and taken up quarters in a disused brewery on the outskirts of the town.

As she entered the alley she saw there was a dark form ahead of her in the gloom and she crouched in a nook as the figure stopped at the window and gave the signal. The window opened, the usual white hand reached out to take whatever message was offered—then there was a flash and a detonation.

The mysterious "No. 63" had been killed through the window. Somehow, she never knew exactly, Marthe was out of the alley and escaped detection. Not long afterward her mother managed to slip the dire news to "Canteen Ma" and soon Marthe was instructed to deliver her reports to the Van Roots' farm on the Thourout-Roulers road.

Thus the Marthe Cnockaert who had been embittered over the acts of German soldiers when her native town was invaded worked among and administered to them and sent away messages at night that would wipe out their fellows somewhere.

On the passions of lustful officers, long away from their women, she played, sometimes barely escaping complete dishonor.

From a colonel who locked her in his room and took her in his arms she drew information that the Kaiser would visit a certain point at a certain day in late 1915, but the visit eventually was called off because someone had the idea of air bombing that sector for two days before.

From a German aviator, drunk and amorous, she learned that Germany was poised for a tremendous air raid over London on Oct. 1, 1916, and this information, forwarded to British Intelligence, resulted in defenses being ready. Among the craft shot down that night over Potter's Bar was the L31—and with it perished, among others, the German chief Zeppelin commander, Mathy.

PRISONERS, supplied with money from her own store, were aided to escape to Holland by Marthe after their injuries had begun to heal; with the civilian employes at the hospital who were spies under her she mined an old abandoned sewer under Roulers and blew up two ammunition dumps.

And always that dread hand of German counter-espionage hovered over her and finally it fell—in late November of 1916.

It was about the time of the mining of the tunnel that she lost her wrist watch. Somewhere, in the tunnel, or near the ammunition dumps, or almost anywhere else, it had come off and dropped. She did not know where or when it had vanished.

A few days later, however, on the bulletin board outside the Town-Kommandant's office, this notice appeared:

"A soldier of the Army of Wurtemberg has been apprehended by the military police for theft. A number of articles found in his possession, from their character, appear to belong to civilians of the town.

"Will any person thinking he recognizes any of the following articles please report at this office between the hours of 10 a. m. and 12 noon."

Of course Marthe Cnockaert should not have claimed the watch described No. 4 on the list, but she did not know where she had lost it and it was possible that a thief had taken it or had stolen it from someone who had found it.

Old Feldwebel Richter removed his curly Bavarian pipe from an astonished face when they brought Marthe to his military prison, under arrest as a spy. This pretty nurse who was so friendly and who was doing so much good at the German Hospital.

"Gott Sie mit euch!" exclaimed the old Bavarian. "God be with you!"

Sinking down on the lumpy cot in her cell, Marthe burst into tears. Outside, the cadence of the marching feet died away in the echoing corridors.

Day after day they hammered at her, attempting to make her tell who her aides were or whom she was under. Officers treated her harshly and officers treated her with apparent compassion—but neither system worked.

One day a pretty Belgian woman came in and said she was to be Marthe's wardress.

"I want to help you all I can, my dear," said the pretty one, smiling. "I know well these detectives who are tormenting you—terrible fellows! Nothing turns them aside.

"Tell me in confidence what you know. We can keep back the vital information, but give me just enough to keep them quiet. I have some influence with them."

What the Belgian woman did not know was that Marthe, her Belgian sister, had seen the new wardress in company with one of the detectives.

"I am saying nothing," replied Marthe. "I know nothing of spies who were working against the Germans in this town."

"Do you realize that if you tell what you know you will be allowed to walk out of this prison a free woman?"

"Go back to your man," said Marthe angrily, "and tell him I'll see him in hell before I say one word to him—or you."

THE woman who had been so saccharine, reddened with rage. She shrieked:

"You'll get what's coming to you."

"Get out—traitor to your country," ordered Marthe wearily, and as the other left, the accused spy sank back on her cot.

Not until several days later, when a German lieutenant called on her and said he had been appointed to defend her (which appointment she refused, incidentally) did she learn where the watch had been found.

It was picked up in the back part of the abandoned sewer which had not been destroyed, and the notice stating it had been found on a thief was but a ruse by investigating officials, of course.

She had determined on one defense—and that was to make no defense. She realized that she was convicted before she entered the court-martial room, and there was nothing that occurred at the court martial in December to show that she had erred in her anticipation.

Herr Doktor Herbert Stolz, oberartz (chief physician) at the Roulers Hospital, came voluntarily to the trial and testified to the noble work of Marthe Cnockaert had been doing among the German ill and injured, for which she had been decorated with the Iron Cross.

The court martial refused to be swayed, and at last the president rose, with a paper in his hand, and addressed her.

"It is a terrible thing to condemn a fellow creature, especially when that creature is a woman," he said, "but you have been the cause of the deaths of many of my countrymen during the months of your nefarious activities.

"The sentence is, therefore, that at an hour and place to be appointed later, you be taken out and shot to death."

In the gray military prison at Ghent, to where she had been transferred, Marthe Cnockaert sat with her thoughts and her misery, unable to communicate with the outside world, until mid-February of 1917.

One day a German priest visited her and said there was a chance she might escape the death penalty. The reaction nearly sent her into hysterics, but the priest calmed her.

That next morning armed guards again called for her and she was returned to the courtroom, where the president of the court martial informed her that the death sentence had been commuted to life imprisonment by the Commander-in-Chief of Areas Under Occupation.

"He has been guided in this," said the president, "by the fact that you had been awarded the Iron Cross for meritorious work in the field, and also owing to the special representations made on your behalf by the authorities at Roulers."

Until the war's end in November, 1918, she remained a prisoner in the stone house at Ghent. Then British Tommies released the prisoners.

Food Value Of Oysters

By MARTHA LEE

We hear there's nothing to the common belief that oysters are less tasty out of the "R" months. They're just not quite so plump, that's all, but perfectly edible. However, we are in the "R" months right now, so let's just forget about that and talk about the oyster himself.

For a long time people didn't know much about this delicacy. We just took him as we found him and loved him for his own sake.

We served him fried, roasted, broiled, baked, panned and scalloped—with never a thought for his history or food value.

But science began investigating, and discovered that oysters are rich in iron—the same substance that made liver famous.

It seems that copper is somehow necessary to make an oyster "set" that is, attach himself firmly to some foundation. This he does at a very early age; and once set, he stays put for the rest of his life.

Oysters are not ready for marketing until they are from two to five years old—sometimes older. Some of the more hardy ones live as many as 15 years. Incidentally, you can tell an oyster's age by counting the rings on his shell.

OYSTER STEW

1 pint oysters (with liquor)
¼ cup butter
1 cup light cream, scalded
3 cups milk, scalded
Pepper
½ tsp. salt
½ tsp. paprika

Pick over oysters; then cook in butter and oyster liquor until edges curl. Add cream and milk. Heat to boiling and season. Serve at once while piping hot with a teaspoonful of butter on top, and plenty of those indispensable morsels, oysterettes with that crisp, salty tang-of-the-sea taste.

But stew is just one way to serve oysters. If you'd like something really different, try Clubhouse oysters on flaky crackers:

CLUBHOUSE OYSTERS

18 oysters
2 tbsp. butter
18 premium flake crackers
Salt and pepper
2 egg whites
1 tsp. horseradish
½ cup cream

Heat drained oysters in butter until edges curl. Place one oyster on each cracker and season. Cover with egg whites beaten with horseradish. Depress center of each mound of egg whites. Brown lightly in slow oven (325 deg. F.). Beat cream with ¼ tsp. salt. Use as garnish in depressions in egg whites, and top with a strip of pimiento. Makes 6 portions.

STEAMED OYSTER LOAF, SEA CLIFF

36 oysters
Salt, cayenne pepper, grated nutmeg
Juice of 1 lemon
2 tbsp. bread crumbs, rolled fine.
1 tsp. meat extract
1 tbsp. tarragon vinegar
2 eggs, beaten
2 tbsp. thick cream
1 can concentrated cream of celery soup
1 cup cooked celery

Cut the oysters in half and put in a saucepan with ½ cup of oyster liquor. Add salt, red pepper, a pinch of grated nutmeg, lemon juice, the bread crumbs, the meat extract, the vinegar. Bring to a boil; and take off the fire. Stir in the beaten eggs and the cream. Butter a mold and dust the sides with bread crumbs, then put in the mixture, covering the mold with buttered paper, and seal tightly. Steam for 1½ hours. Turn out and serve with a celery sauce made by combining the heated can of concentrated cream of celery soup with the cooked celery. (From Long Island Seafood Cook Book.)

Rose Oils Soften Skin

By ARLINE GOULD

THIS IS one season when you oughtn't to have time on your hands . . . all the little theater groups are working up whanging good draymers . . . the winter sports crowd is planning its week-ends . . . all the fun in the world is coming to a whirling start . . . don't get left out of any of it.

If your skin is looking shriveled, so you want to hide your face in your hands . . . do so, but be sure they're well anointed with a marvelous new "velve of roses" dry skin cream . . . and it will come up blooming after a few treatments!

This we're assured, is made by an entirely new process that renders it wonderfully sympathetic to the type of dryness the average skin inevitably encounters. One point which impressed us particularly is its flow-free consistency, with nary a trace of waxiness to it.

Among other things, it contains oil of rose . . . the expensive, rare attar of rose, which not only gives it fragrance but makes it beautifully softening and soothing.

And true it is that one overnight treatment shows your skin more supple and pliant, and gives it a dewiness that you should continue through the day . . . by using a dry skin foundation for your powder. Why lose the cherished look throughout the day if you don't have to?

After cleansing your face before bedtime, massage and pat the merest film of "velvet of roses" into your skin, all over face, throat and neck. And leave it on. In spite of its newness and expensive ingredients you may buy a nice jar of this cream for $1.

If you'd like to learn about this new-process dry skin cream with rose oils, phone Arline Gould, LIBerty 4000, week-days until 5:30, or write, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

NO matter how many tickets the police give out, parking problems don't mean a thing to Hamilton Osgood . . . When he rides from his Chestnut Hill home to his office in the financial district each morning, it is not in a business coupe, nor a chauffeur-piloted limousine, but on a humble two-wheeled bicycle, just like little Willie's . . .

Ham is an Englishman and while at Oxford acquired the habit of going where he wants to go on a bike which gives him countless miles on a gallon and can be parked in hallways . . . If you have seen him pedalling up State Street, looking like a dignified banker who had just borrowed the office boy's bike for a trial run, and wondered what it was all about, the answer is quite simple . . . It's raw-ther an old English custom . . .

While Ham is either pedalling or exercising his executive duties, his attractive wife devotes much of her time to affairs of the English Speaking Union and the Infants' Hospital . . . At present she is busy with plans for the Infants' fall benefit, the lecture by Hon. Alfred Duff Cooper, former First Lord of the British Admiralty, at Symphony Hall, Nov. 28 . . . She is a member of Mrs. F. Wadsworth Busk's entertainment committee for the affair . . .

COD LIVER OIL— IS IT HARMFUL?

IS THERE ANY LOSS IN VITAMINS?

By DR. WALTER H. EDDY
Director of Good Housekeeping Bureau

Questions concerning foods, sanitation, and health will be answered only if a stamped, addressed envelope accompanies your request. No exceptions can be made to this rule. Prescriptional advice cannot be given, nor can food or drug samples be analyzed. Address Dr. Walter H. Eddy, 57th st. at 8th ave., New York city.

Can Be Used in Goats' Milk

Can the unpoited Bulgarian Bacillus culture be used in goats' milk as well as in cows' milk?

MRS. D. E. W.

Both the Bulgarian bacillus and the ordinary Acidophilus bacillus grow on milk sugar, and both cows' milk and goats' milk contain this milk sugar, or lactose. Consequently there is no reason why the organism could not be cultured in goats' milk as well as in cows' milk.

Little, if Any, Loss

When I strain green peas through a sieve and throw away the skins saving the pulp only, do I lose any vitamins?

E. C.

It has been found that, in potatoes and apples there is a little higher distribution of vitamins close to the skins than in the deeper parts. As for peas, we have no figures on this question. In general, however, since the skin of the peas is so exceedingly thin, the loss, if any, must be slight.

Cod Liver Oil Not Harmful

I have heard that cod liver oil has a detrimental effect on the heart and muscles. Is this true?

MRS. I. S. H.

Some time ago experiments conducted with herbivorous animals indicated that excess of cod liver oil in their diet brought about what is called muscular dystrophy, especially in the heart muscles. At first this effect was thought to be due to excess of vitamin A, but further tests indicated that it was something in the cod liver oil use, not the vitamin, which was responsible for the action. It also became apparent that herbivorous animals react quite differently to cod liver oil than human beings or carnivorous animals. Using the fine cod liver oil such as is provided for human consumption no such disturbances have appeared in the human being, and you need have no fear of the use of medicinal cod liver oils in the amounts in which they are prescribed today.

Differ in Vitamin Potency

Will you kindly give me the comparative health values of taking halibut liver oil and cod liver oil?

J. E.

So far as is known at the present time, the sole contribution of fish oils to the body is their vitamin A and D content. Halibut liver oils are much richer in general in vitamin A and somewhat richer in vitamin D. For that reason it is possible to get the required amounts of vitamins A and D from a smaller amount of halibut liver oil than of cod liver oil, and that is the principal reason for the use of the former at the present time. Whether you use halibut liver oil or cod liver oil depends upon the number of units of Vitamins A and D required. There is a general agreement that we need 6000 units of vitamin A and between 300 and 400 units of vitamin D a day. You should look on the label for the potency and figure out your dosage accordingly.

VITAMIN D is the anti-rachitic vitamin, because its absence results in rickets. It is obtained by free exposure to sunlight and by the inclusion in the diet of cod liver oil.

BLONDIE A Man and His Dreams

NEW AMERICAN

A Complete Short Story Daily on This Page

By HELEN CHRISTINE BENNETT

"OKAY, Tony." Sarana touched the button that controlled the closing of the elevator door, and touched a second button that sent the car shooting upwards. He was all alone—and he loved it.

It was seldom that the express, stopping only at the 23d, 34th, 50th and 64th floors, went up without passengers. Tony looked about the car with the pride of an owner.

Then his thoughts flew back to the years before he had known this car—the terrifying, hungry flight across Spain.

Somehow his father had managed to conceal under his rags the gold that had made their coming to America possible. Then the gold all went and there came a time of poverty and need, of work, a day here and a day there.

In seven years Tony grew stronger and stronger. He was slim and wiry and not too tall. At night he had gone to school, where his teacher discovered his aptitude for mechanics and advised a vocational training.

Studying three nights a week for two dogged, persistent years, Tony had mastered enough of fundamentals to apply for the elevator job. Mr. MacPherson, the superintendent of the building, hesitated.

"You be bright enough me lad but you seem a bit on the young side."

"I'm 22. I'm a man and I vote. I'm an American citizen." MacPherson's mind went back to a day—could it be 30 years ago—when he had used almost those very words as he applied for his first real job.

"Heigho—now be thinkin' of that—well, maybe we can give you a trial."

That was a year ago, a wonderful year. The car slid gently to a stop at 23. Tony opened the door, shot a swift glance into the mirrors set slantwise in the frame of the elevator at either side, thus reflecting the whole length of the corridor to the side turns.

No doors opening; he closed the door and shot upwards to 34. That was Mr. Carstairs' floor. There were 20 other tenants but to Tony 34 belonged to Carstairs and Carstairs, Consulting Engineers.

Despite the two names there was but one Carstair, and his private office crossed the corridor at its left end.

Mr. Carstairs was always friendly. On Tony's first morning he had questioned him and had advised going on with the night classes. Before holidays he invariably handed Tony a plain envelope. The bill enclosed was accompanied by a note with good wishes for the holiday. Carstairs was swell.

The elevator was sliding to the stop at 34. Tony opened. The corridor was empty but Carstairs' door was opening. Two men came out, men in a hurry. One carried a bag. The Carstairs door was still open.

The Cast of Characters in "New American"

TONY, who operates an elevator in a skyscraper and is proud of his American citizenship.

MR. CARSTAIRS, a consultant engineer whom Tony actually adores.

A DESPERATE PAIR

Through the aperture Tony saw clearly reflected in the slantwise glass, a man slumped over a flat-topped desk. The two men were brushing by him, were in the car.

"Shut that door quick and take us straight down." The voice was low but threatening. A powerful arm was about Tony and something small and hard pressed into his ribs.

"I can't."

"Why not?"

"The cars are under general control. This one goes straight up to 64 and stops at 50. It has to go that way."

"Yaah," there followed a string of frightened oaths from the heavy set second man.

"Shut up, you. Nick never fails. Go up boy and skip 50."

"The car won't skip."

"Darn these modern cars. Stop at 50, open a little and go on. Will it do that?"

"Yes."

"Then get on. And no monkey business."

Tony touched the button and the car moved up. At 50, with the gun still there and the hands of the second man over his mouth, Tony stopped, slid the door open a crack, shut it and was off again.

If he could only reach the emergency signal.

It was low, under the regular buttons and on the side of a panel. And they were holding him, both of them.

Suddenly the first man took the gun away.

He was a white-faced, cadaverous creature, and he grabbed the bag and looked into it.

"You hold him." Out of the side of his eye Tony could see banknotes being taken out of the bag and stuffed into pockets. The man seemed made of pockets, his whole coat must be lined with them.

"Now see here, kid. At 64 we leave like regular passengers, see. You don't know a thing." Tony managed to nod.

"He's goin' queer," said the second man anxiously. Tony was indeed queer. His arms and legs shot out in odd ways as if the joints had ceased to function. His head, despite the man holding it, lolled.

"I can't hold him, he's slippin', wow!"

For Tony, almost boneless, had slipped from him like a guppy and lay limp on the floor.

"Epileptic," grounted the white-faced man. "He's out. But watch him."

It was too late to watch Tony. On that slide down he had lurched so that he could touch the emergency button twice. If this wasn't a double emergency Tony didn't know one.

He lay passive on the floor, arms, legs and head at weird angles, while the two bent over him.

THEY HAD GONE!

"I watched. I knew how to get out. "Gag him in case he comes too." A dirty rag was thrust tight into Tony's mouth, and they tried to roll him to one side. It was awkward, his arms and legs flopped in odd ways. Tim and Ole, Tony was thinking. Could they get down from the emergency on the roof in time?

"I can't hold him, he's slippin', wow!" the robber cried desperately.

The car was sliding to the stop at 64. White-face pressed a button, but the door did not budge.

Frantic, he fumbled with the buttons and hit the right one. The door slid open. To Tony's dismay there was no sound from the corridor. They had gone—where were Ole and Tim? He rolled over, tore at the rag, struggled to his feet and met Ole and Tim in the doorway.

"Two men," he gasped. "Slugged Mr. Carstairs. Stop 'em." Tim was already wiggling buttons in the car.

"'Sall right," he said calmly. "I've given fire and thieves and close all exits. It might take a while. But we'll get 'em. Signal goes to all cars."

"But the stairs."

"No one's goin' to walk down from 64, grunted Ole. "C'm on, let's go to 34." They waited for Tony to start the car. At 34 they locked it and left. Carstairs had already been discovered, and a doctor bustled in.

"Slugged. Concussion. Better take him to a hospital."

Tony turned away sick. Tim nudged him. On the rear wall a panel apparently like the rest of the white painted surface stood at right angles.

Within, a small safe stood open. Tony looked from the safe to Mr. Carstairs. He had done his best but those two slugs——

Every office had been warned. The entire building had been closed. Above the milling street crowds on the ground floor, policemen, firemen, detectives guarded cars, stairs and corridors. There had not been time for the men to get away; they would be found.

PANIC MURDER

On the 57th floor they got the second man, unconscious, huddled in a broom and mop closet. There was blood on the floor. Detective Burt turned him over.

"Shot," he said. "Partner turned panicky. Get after that madman."

Everybody was hunting now. In the offices men and girls opened closet after closet, looked under tables and desks. Upstairs and down, upstairs and down.

It was Ole who saw him first. On a ledge outside the 23d floor he was crawling from one window to the next.

"Vacant office, muttered Ole. He unlocked a door, opened it, ran through and leaned out the window.

The crawler saw him, tried to back—and fell. There was silence!

"Well, that's an end of him," said Ole "Hope he didn't hit any one."

He had not. The body was found in a paved court. No one happened to be there.

When it was all over Mr. MacPherson sent for Tony.

"It's congratulatin' you, I am," he said proudly. "You young American."

A man in spectacles hovering around approached Tony.

"Know what you did, Kid? That was Nick Famer, wanted in three states D'je know there's a reward of a thousand bucks?"

"I didn't get him. All I did was to signal."

"But he had a gun on you. How'd je do it?" Tony hesitated Then before the astonished eyes of the men waiting to go on night shift, MacPherson, the detective and the spectacled man, he seemed to go all awry. A leg shot out one way, an arm another. A limp lump, he slid to the floor at MacPherson's feet

"The boy's got a fit!" shouted MacPherson. And paused. For Tony looking up at him opened and closed one eye, pulled himself to rights and rose, straight and lithe and grinning.

"It's a contortionist's trick. I could do it when I was a little kid. It fooled them so I could reach the signal. You have to be double jointed."

The man in spectacles started for the door.

"I'm sending a photographer," he yelled. But Tony would not be photographed unless Tim and Ole and Detective Burt and Mr. MacPherson stood with him.

"How could I get him alone?" he demanded. "Not a chance."

Tony Sarana has a desk in the private office of Carstairs and Carstairs, Consultant Engineers. Mr. Edward Carstairs, the remaining partner, helped him bank his share of the reward—all save ten dollars.

Tony bought an American flag with that.

And as the Saranas live on the top floor near the river, travelers down the Hudson can see it floating from a flagstaff Tony ran up on the roof.

The ... Sunday Nov. 19, Annex ... 10 Sth Annual Used Car Sale — This yearly feature sponsored by the Record American Sunday Advertiser has ... such great success each year, that we are only too pleased to lend our support to the continuation of this great feature.

During the last years of its inception the Annual Used Car Sale sold $77,000 worth of cars for the dealers who participated. The second year saw the figure almost doubled to the sum of $142,760—The last sale saw it mount to $243,767—and this year we expect it to reach at least a quarter of a million.

CHICAGO, Nov. 15 (AP)—M. L. Annenberg and his associates began liquidating their vast race news empire today with the intention of quitting the business forever.

The far-flung organization known as the Nationwide News Service, Inc., took steps to end dissemination of horse race information by tomorrow noon.

Recently a target of federal and State prosecutors, the wire network for years has carried race entries, odds, results, payoff prices and other information from tracks to betting parlors.

Meanwhile, Annenberg and 19 others were summoned to federal court today for arraignment on indictments alleging violation of the income tax and other laws.

CANADA, CUBA AFFECTED

U. S. Dist. Atty. William J. Campbell said dissolution of the wire network had no bearing on the criminal cases; that "no agreement of any sort" had been discussed or contemplated.

The income tax charges against Annenberg alleged he owed the government approximately $5,500,000 in back income taxes and penalties.

The liquidation of Nationwide News Service will affect every state in the nation as well as Canada and Cuba, and apparently will deprive bookmakers of their only nation-wide wire network.

In a civil suit here last spring counsel for the news service denied that it had a monopoly on the race information field but admitted it was the only organization operating on a national scale.

"BIGGEST RACKET"

Prosecutor Campbell said the abandonment of the network represented "a clear cut victory for the Department of Justice in its effort to rid the nation of a vast illegal combine to violate federal and state laws."

State's Atty. Thomas J. Courtney of Cook County (Chicago) called it "the end of the biggest racket in the country."

Campbell said Annenberg and his associates had informed him through counsel that they would "definitely and forever quit the business of providing race information over wires to gamblers and bookies."

Furthermore, Campbell said, they have "expressed a wish to assist the government in preventing the dissemination by anyone of race information for illegal purposes."

VIOLATED LOTTERY LAWS

Weymouth Kirkland, counsel for Annenberg, stated that his client's action should not be construed as an admission that the business was illegal.

"The only law under which the government has ever questioned its legality is the federal lottery law," Kirkland said, adding an opinion that the law was inapplicable.

BULLETIN

CHICAGO, Nov. 15 (AP)—The nation-wide Race News Service, turf information network serving thousands of bookmakers across the country, will supend business today, counsel for the system announced in federal court.

Atty. Weymouth Kirkland informed Judge James H. Wilkerson that the 28 offices of the vast agency would close some time during the day, but he said the exact hour for the shutdown had not yet been fixed.

In the pending criminal cases the government contended bookmakers operating off the track were in effect engaged in a lottery scheme and that the Nationwide News Service and its owners were involved in a conspiracy to violate lottery laws by serving the bookmakers.

Atty. Kirkland said Annenberg "has had under consideration for several years separating himself from this business but the tax problems involved have proved insurmountable."

"In view of the criticism that has been directed at the business on the part of the government and the United States attorney," Kirkland added, "Mr. Annenberg—acting on the advice of his counsel—has concluded that he no longer desires to be connected with the business, even as a stockholder.

"No effort will be made to dispose of it by sale or transfer; it will be abandoned."

The attorney asserted his client had been advised the business was legal when he purchased an interest in it in 1927.

The amount of revenue produced by Nationwide News Service was a matter of conjecture.

Prosecutor Campbell recently asserted in an affidavit that the Annenberg interests had received $7,724,531 during the years 1933-36 from "bookies and gamblers" in the Chicago metropolitan district.

HARVARD MAY GET JOCK SUTHERLAND

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 15 (INS)—Pittsburgh, if one is to believe today's reports via gridiron grapevine, will lose Dr. John B. (Jock) Sutherland, late of Pitt, and Coach Bill Kern of Carnegie Tech.

Sutherland, who resigned as head Pitt football coach last spring, has signed with an unnamed Eastern school, the reports said.

Kern, long reported dissatisfied at Tech, was rumored considering an offer from West Virginia University.

Kern was Sutherland's first assistant at Pitt before crossing the campus to the Tartan camp.

It is more than possible that Jock Sutherland will land at Harvard next fall, incredible as it may seem.

In a radio interview a few days back, the former Pitt coach was asked pointedly whether he would coach at Yale, Southern California or several other colleges next fall. A vociferous "NO" was his response to every question.

But no mention was made of Harvard.

It hasn't been widely publicized but the chilly winds blowing off the Charles these bleak November days do not sit well with Dick Harlow's aging frame.

He was a sick man a year ago, a very sick man. Pneumonia is no joke to a man in his fifties.

It is because of this mainly that it is believed Dick will shift to Maryland's warmer climes at season's end.

Wouldn't it be ironical if Sutherland were to succeed Harlow at Harvard?

JOCK SUTHERLAND

Sutherland, who believes strongly in subsidization; Sutherland, who was the center of the most searching investigation ever conducted in football; Sutherland, the defensive master, the antithesis of Harlow.

Well, time will tell.

Thomas Appears Before Board

NEW YORK, Nov. 15 (AP)—Harry Thomas, the Eagle Bend, Minn., heavyweight who recently charged that the fights in which he was knocked out by Max Schmeling and Tony Galento had been "fixed" was summoned before the New York State Athletic Commission. After being sworn in, he was granted a week's postponement in order to obtain counsel.

The commission also called in Arthur Donovan, who refereed the Schmeling-Thomas bout, but postponed questioning him.

After the postponement, Thomas insisted, "I'm standing pat on what I said. I just merely want to take every precaution I can. I prefer to be represented by my attorney."

Mr. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

IT IS THE unexpected that makes the Hearst All-America amateur boxing championships the biggest show of the indoor season each year. There are always some new ring stars bobbing to the front who can box a bit and toss punches.

Amateur ring stars come over night without any great amount of ballyhoo. The new sensation is usually some boy who has been hitting a punching bag and trading blows for a few rounds with one of the boys from the corner.

That is the history of youthful Norman Kenyon who traveled alone 140 miles from Chester to win the final bout of the 147-pound class. Kenyon has learned something about boxing without the aid of a manager or second. The boy is a mill grinder by trade, and when his day's work was over he would go to an improvised gym, punch the bag, and do some boxing if he could get a sparring partner.

Kenyon wrote out an entry blank for the Hearst-America show, and came to Boston alone. When he reported to Tom Kanaly at the Arena, he had that rare confidence that only goes with youth. He felt he could punch his way to victory over the opposition in the 147-pound class.

The Chester amateur was in what was considered the best division of the show. It was necessary for him to win from Tony Ferlisi in a torrid trial bout. In the semi-final, he disposed of Joseph DePetro of Boston.

These two triumphs sent Kenyon into action against Mike Caselo of Boston in the final. Caselo is a rugged, two-fisted youngster who has shown to advantage in other amateur boxing tournaments.

To the amazement and delight of the crowd, the inexperienced Kenyon came through to win. Kenyon displayed a good left hook, while he would drive hard right-hand blows to the jaw when openings presented themselves.

By virtue of his victory Kenyon qualified for the New England finals that will be staged at the Garden on Dec. 11. Kenyon will have gained boxing experience by that time and will make a mighty bid to win the right to compete in the All-Eastern finals.

I ALWAYS get a kick out of amateur heavyweight bouts. William Weinberg of Chelsea, who won the final of the heavyweight class by knocking out Joe Burke of Hyde Park, is a big, rangy boxer with an exceptionally good left hook. The average run of amateur heavyweights likes to toss right hand punches. It was refreshing to see a husky like Weinberg win his bout with left hooks. The Weinberg left hook only travels about ten inches, and when it lands it has terrific power behind it.

Frank Chludinski, Hyde Park giant, was in a ringside pew, and told George Freeman of the Irish-American A. A. that he will later enter the All-America tournament.

Tony Ferry, Fall River heavyweight, also notified Freeman he will soon be tossing blows in the All-America battles. Ferry has been out of action as a result of a cold, but he will soon resume training. On past performances, Ferry looks like the best of the New England amateur heavyweights.

Lou Vivolo, who conquered Freddy McLean of Boston in the final of the 160-pound division, showed considerable class. He kept inside of McLean's crushing punch and succeeded in opening a cut over one of the Roxbury warrior's eyes.

McLean wasn't a bit downcast by his defeat and asked Tom Kanaly to enter him in another one of the Hearst All-America trial bouts. He still is hopeful that he can punch his way into the New England finals at the Garden.

Twenty-seven bouts, featuring 19 knockouts, at the opening trial tournament, gave the fans a good show. This is why amateur boxing has made such a big hit with thousands of fans.

Seconds Give Tournament Much Color

THE SECONDS for many of the amateur boxers give added color to the All-America tournament. What some of these seconds lack in knowledge they more than make up for by their enthusiasm. The average second of an amateur boxer is his pal. They plan the fight together, and during the hostilities the second seems to be suffering more than the boxer if things are not going well.

You also see famous handlers of boxers like Harry Kelley, Al Lacy and Dick Merritt. They whisper words of advice into the ears of their young charges, and patch up their cuts and sooth their bruises with an expert touch.

These veteran trainers are always seeking a new ring star who some day may skyrocket to a world's championship. It is from the ranks of the amateurs that graduate the professional stars of tomorrow.

The slogan of the Hearst All-America tournament is "California, Here We Come!" There isn't a youngster in the big show who isn't anxious to win a place on the team that will compete in the grand nationals at San Francisco on Jan. 25.

Boxers from the East, West, South and the West Coast will take part in the grand nationals. It is felt by keen judges of amateur boxing that our New England stars have a splendid opportunity to gain new ring fame in the California bouts.

I'll be parked against the ring at the Arena once more on next Monday night when the second trial tournament in the Hearst All-America tournament is held.

Springfield Club Loses As Shore Helps Bruins

By BILL GRIMES

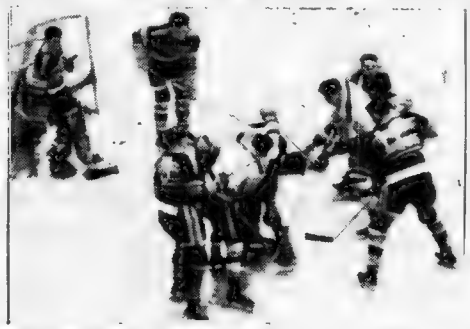
While his Indians were losing an overtime game to Cleveland last night in Springfield, Eddie Shore was sparking the Bruins to a 3 to 1 victory over the Chicago Blackhawks at the Boston Garden.

There's no question but that if Eddie had been handling his club, the Indians would have beaten Cleveland over the regulation distance.

But, Shore was with the Bruins, who are short handed due to the injury that Jack Crawford suffered during an exhibition game last week in Owen Sound, Ont.

Although he hasn't been on skates for ten days, Shore turned in one of his best games. A pass out by Shore to "Flash" Hollett with seven minutes remaining in the third period was converted into the tieing goal and then in overtime, Milt Schmidt broke the deadlock and "Flash" Hollett clinched the verdict with less than two minutes to play.

It was a fine win for the Bruins but a tough game to lose for the Black Hawks. During the third minute of the opening period Doug Bentley, who was brought up from the amateur ranks this fall, grabbed a Mush March rebound and scored. And the Hawks managed to protect their lead until the 14th minute of the third canto, when Shore and Hollett tied the count.



SICK HIM, TIGE—A loose puck is the signal for flying sticks and plenty joustling when the Bruins and Hawks meet. The boys of both teams are shown whooping it up in front of the visitors' net.

Mickie Ion and Ag Smith were the officials and did a perfect job . . . Doug Bentley, an ex-amateur, looks like a coming star . . . Paul Thompson is piloting a bunch of youngsters, who will cause plenty of trouble this season in the N. H. L. . . . The Hawks were "down" after the game . . . The Bruins will pull out for Montreal this evening and will remain in the Quebec metropolis until Saturday noon . . . They are scheduled to meet Les Canadiens tomorrow night at the Forum and they'll play a return engagement with the Hawks Sunday night in Chicago

They say that Eddie Shore is receiving $200 per game for playing with the Bruins . . . He's well worth it for until the announcement was made that he was to play with the Bruins last night, the advance sale was small . . . Eddie packed his equipment and drove to Springfield last night.

Phil Hergesheimer is much bigger than when he played with the Bruin Cubs . . . Bill Cowley received a painful crack on the ankle and Dit Clapper has a stitch taken just to starboard of his right eye.

FOOTBALL FLASHES

By BILL GRIMES

Just because Boston College has knocked over Temple, St. Anselm's, Auburn and Detroit, and because Boston University fell before Western Reserve and Manhattan, football fans will make a mistake to figure that the Eagles will toss the Terriers out of Fenway Park Saturday afternoon.

Of course, the Eagles will enter the game as favorites. They are fully entitled to be rated higher than the Terriers. But, football games are not won on the ratings of the so-called experts.

Under "Pat" Hanley, the Terriers give the Eagles plenty of trouble annually. Coach Hanley's material doesn't measure up to that which wears the old gold and maroon, but every fall "Pat" manages to develop a defense that's troublesome and to put on an offense, which makes Boston College play heads up football to stave off defeat.

Pat Hanley

The Boston College and Boston University football games should be a natural. If the authorities at B. C. and B. U. could be made to realize that fact, the Eagles and Terriers would play to capacity crowds annually. But, apparently, the powers that be are not as well versed athletically as they are scholastically.

Frank Leahy recognizes and appreciates "Pat" Hanley's ability, for he is just as much concerned over Saturday's game with B. U. as he was over Auburn and Detroit.

LEAHY REALIZES SITUATION

Leahy realizes that Hanley, during his long career as a football mentor, has acquired a thorough knowledge of the Notre Dame system. He is confident that B. U. will be equipped with defenses for every straight Notre Dame play that the Eagles use.

So, in the event that his regular stuff doesn't click, Coach Leahy will slip a couple of aces out of his sleeve in the form of a double wing back formation.

In all probability, Boston College will show more stuff against B. U. at Fenway Park on Saturday than it has uncovered in any game this season.

After the great wins they turned in over Temple, St. Anselm's, Auburn and Detroit, the Eagles are entitled to better support than they have received this season. But, we'll predict right now that the Terriers will have a larger and far more enthusiastic following at Fenway Park on Saturday.

With the possible exceptions of the Dartmouth-Cornell and the Holy Cross-Carnegie Tech games, it should be a breeze to pick the winners of New England college games for this week end.

GRIMES' CHOICES

But, frequently, breezes flatten out and leave prognosticators holding the well known bag.

But, nevertheless, whether it's a breeze or a flat calm, here 'tis:

Boston College to beat Boston University.
Harvard to beat New Hampshire.
Cornell to beat Dartmouth.
Holy Cross to beat Carnegie Tech.
Brown to beat Conn. University.
Bowdoin to beat Tufts.
St. Anselm's to beat Providence.
Wesleyan to beat Trinity.
Amherst to beat Williams.
Norwich to beat Lowell Textile.
Middlebury to beat Vermont.
Mass. State to beat R. P. I.
Princeton to beat Yale.

The Dartmouth-Cornell, Holy Cross-Carnegie Tech and the Princeton-Yale games are the outstanding gridiron conflicts in New England on Saturday.

The Big Green and the Big Red elevens will clash at Hanover with the visitors heavily favored to retain their unbeaten, untied record.

Despite the setback at Princeton last Saturday, the Indians will not suffer from the lack of alumni support for the Boston & Maine will run a special to Hanover.

Cornell staged a remarkable comeback to nip Ohio State three weeks ago. But, the Ithacans were lucky to beat Columbia and fortunate not to have been tied by Colgate.

Shalom Picked To Toss M'Lain

Because he has been piling up a long and steady list of victories against all comers, Big Ben Shalom, 240-pound Jewish wrestling star, will rule a slight favorite when he clashes with Mayes McLain, former Haskell All America football great, in the main bout of Promoter Paul Bowser's tournament tonight at the Boston Arena.

Shalom has cracked down everybody they have pitted him against, and, if he is successful against McLain, he plans to start an immediate campaign toward getting a title bout.

McLain has been grappling now for about 10 years and in that time he has met the best of them.

The semi-final finds Leo Numa, the former Black Secret, down for an engagement with Gus Sonnenberg, former champion.

Bobby Managof Manoogian, who recently conquered Danno O'Mahony, will battle big Jim Wright, the tough Texan in a special match.

Other bouts will include Frank Judson of Attleboro vs. Joe Marsh of New York, and Gene Bowman of Philadelphia vs. Joe Cook.

Spreyer, Lee Spark Remodeled Harlows

Dick Harlow sent his Harvard squad through a long drill yesterday which was marked by some fine play on the part of Capt. Torby Macdonald and the soph ace, Charley Spreyer. Most of the session was spent on work in preparation for the Eli game two weeks away, but New Hampshire is not being overlooked in the Harvard camp.

After a short drill against New Hampshire plays the Harvard team was sent through a long pass workout which makes it look as though air maneuvers are going to play an important part in the Crimson plans to set back Yale for the third year in a row. Macdonald and Spreyer shared the tossing with the return of Macdonald to form as the most encouraging note of the workout.

MACDONALD ON TEAM A

This afternoon Dick Harlow will send his team through a hard scrimmage. Macdonald will participate in the rough work for the first time since Sept. 30. If Macdonald comes through in good form he will probably be in the starting lineup this Saturday. The Crimson leader has been participating in the full drills this week and ran with Team "A" in most of the workouts.

Brown and Elser, both subs, were hurt in Monday's workout and were listed as the latest casualties on the doctor's list. Chub Peabody, soph who has won a starting guard berth, took a severe beating in the Army game and did not practice yesterday.

In recent games the work of Charley Spreyer has over-shadowed the fine play of another soph who is just about the best back on the Crimson team. Frannie Lee is the young gent who has been carrying the mail for the Crimson into pay dirt. It was Lee who dashed 47 yards for the lone Crimson tally against the Tigers.

It was Lee who tore off 17 yards to register the first Harvard touchdown against Army. Frannie was also partially responsible for the Cantabs' score against Penn when he hauled down a wabbly pass from Spreyer on the five-yard line.

Lee and Spreyer have built up a great reputation for the ability to come through. At Choate school where both players prepped, the two soph stars on the present Harvard team, were responsible for two undefeated seasons at the Connecticut school.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Nov. 15 (INS)—The Cleveland Barons outroughed the Springfield Indians to survive a wild overtime period and win 5 to 4 in an International-American League hockey game.

Fourteen penalties were meted out during the contest, each team drawing seven. The extra ten-minute period saw a total of five goals with the Rams caging three quick ones, two by Runge and one by Duguid. The Indians bounced back only to see their wild surge fail just short of a tie.

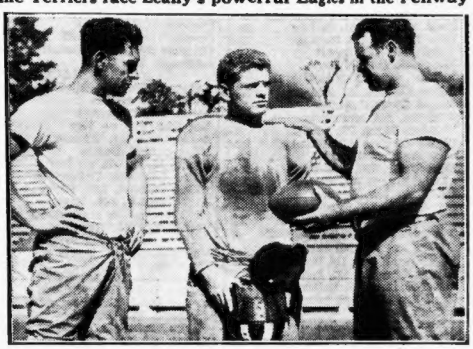
Bill Barry Will Start at End For Terriers Against Eagle Eleven

By DAVE GLUECK

Bill Barry, South Boston boy and former English High star, will start at end for Boston University when the Terriers face Leahy's powerful Eagles in the Fenway Saturday.



"WAIST HIGH." Coach Buzz Harvey gives Co-Captain Jim Duffy instructions in the manly art of football. Aide Nick Morris looks on. Harvey and Morris were Holy Cross greats a college generation ago. Now they've got one of state's standout elevens at Saugus High.

As he recited the news, Pat Hanley was putting on woolen underwear and sweat shirts in preparation for the polar wind that sweeps Nickerson Field after dark.

Jim McDonald, senior end, and defensive play caller has been out for two weeks with an injured knee cartilage. He will not be in shape for the Eagles so Barry is being readied to pair up with Lanata on the flanks, and Murphy, who knows both the end assignments can second either boy.

Ray Needham, senior center who played such a standout game against Western Reserve, is also suffering from a cartilage ailment. He insists that he will go sixty minutes Saturday, but Hanley is inclined to call this whistling in the dark, and has Sid Michaels, his present "center squad" warming up for a busy and lonesome Saturday afternoon.

In fact, there are probably six men in the Terrier front wall who will start and finish without relief. Barry and Lanata at the ends, Capt. Sullivan and Gianotti at the tackles, Cremens at guard, and Michaels at center.

SULLIVAN AT HALFBACK

In the backfield, the half backs will be Jim Sullivan and Cassidy. Behind them are Clark and Charlie Thomas, pass catching Negroe from Cleveland. John Weidemeyer, big first string fullback is still bothered by a shoulder injury, and may not see much action.

This puts the Hanley men in a spot, since they have to adjust their full quarter back combination with regard to having a punter in the game.

If the Terriers get the wind at whistle time Salvati and Pantano, the number two kicker, will start. If the breeze is against them, Connearney will start at quarter, and Walt Williams boot-boss will be in at full.

Williams, brilliant sophomore star who didn't play ball, as a freshman or in spring practice has developed surprisingly in each successive game.

Last week against Cincinnati, the Hub lads were leading in the fourth quarter when Pantano had a punt blocked. The line held for four downs, and got the ball again, but a short boot and a fifteen-yard penalty put the leaders deep in their own territory.

Hanley used him last time out to send Williams in with prayers and exhortations.

Big Walter took the ball and despite stiff wind in his face whaled it far down the field, to put his mates out of danger. Then he smiled over at the bench and made a "safe at home motion" with his hand.

COOL UNDER FIRE

Hanley calls Williams "Elmer," because he is so relaxed. A good passer and runner, great things are expected from the fullback flash in future years.

By this time Pat had finished putting on clothes, and we went out to the field. The boys were called together for a defensive scrimmage and seemed to handle the scrub version of B. C. plays very creditably. Whether they can stop the originals as executed by the powerful Eagle line is an entirely different story.

With his men weary from games with heavier clubs, and considerably outweigher again on Saturday, Hanley does not count on gaining via the ground. All his backs pass fairly well, although Williams is the ace, and some of them are good receivers, he will probably spend considerable time perfecting an aerial attack in which the B. C.s have demonstrated some weakness this year.

NO GLOVE. Ralph Salvati of B. U. catches passes like Duffy Lewis used to pull down fly balls from his famous cliff at Fenway Park. Ralph's one of Terrier standbys for game with Eagles Saturday.

SAUGUS CHALLENGES ANY CLUB IN STATE

By MICHAEL GILLOOLY

That rumpus and ruction that have been roaring up and down the North Shore these past few weeks haven't been the first signs of winter setting in; simply Coach Buzz Harvey's Saugus high eleven clamoring for recognition for its excellent showing.

With practically every other team in the vicinity bogged down with defeats, Saugus alone remains to uphold that sector's fame on the gridiron.

And if Coach Harvey had his way, there'd be a state championship, and every other honor there is to win tucked away in the Saugus town hall. That's what the former Holy Cross star thinks of his third edition of the Sachems.

Since the opening game when Medford edged out a hard fought victory, Saugus has not been stopped, its only other let-down being the Melrose game. In that contest, the Harvey A. C. scored a touchdown only to have the play recalled and the tilt went down in the records as a 6 to 6 tie.

HARVEY PRAISES TEAM

Harvey will tell you in no mild manner that his Saugus club, numbering only 25 players, is the best in New England. And if you won't listen to Harvey, assistant-Coach Nick Morris, another former Purple ace who should know football, will do his best to convince you along the same theme.

"We lost to Medford on a blocked kick as they made six first downs to our five but there's not another opponent who has made three since then," declares Harvey.

"Right now we can beat anybody. We have the best ball club in New England and I'm not popping off. You can have your Medfords, Brocktons and Lawrence but we'll beat any one of them.

"I'd love to be facing Medford one of them.

'I'd love to be facing Medford this Saturday. We played them without a center but let's have the same team this week and we'd show them some real football.

"We toyed with Wakefield which later beat Rindge Tech. We really whipped Melrose which later tied Malden. We swamped Gloucester and Swampscott.

SQUAD VERSATIVE

"The squad has everything, speed, aggressiveness, power, versatility—anything you ask for. There's no single star, everybody has been pitching in with the work.

"Stanley Green is the best end I've seen in schoolboy ranks since I came to Saugus three years ago, I'll match my tackles, guards and centers with any linemen. John Harrington, my quarterback, knows more football than a lot of college players.

"Then there's Shipulski, who has run wild all year, Pratt, Atkins, Mansfield, Vatcher, Allen, Walkey.

"I really mean it. We have the best team in New England."

And Harvey has the entire Saugus population to back him up. As proof take the Gloucester game when the town might just as well have locked up its gates.

The fans hired a special train, packed the band on board and then rooted the club to a 26 to 0 victory. That doesn't happen to a Gloucester team every day in the season.

Saugus faces Marblehead this Saturday before the wind-up with Danvers on Thanksgiving Day, so if you want a sure winner, bet the Sachems to clean up on the say-so of Handicapper Harvey.

GRID PEP RALLY PLAN OF STUDENT AT ARLINGTON

Arlington High school fans, bursting with enthusiasm, will stage a pre-game pep rally through the streets of Medford Friday night in a huge automobile parade—the starting point at Mystic st.

Arlington, beaten only by Leominster, meets an undefeated Medford grid machine in one of the feature games on Saturday's schoolboy program.

Mass. State Wins Over Coast Guard

NEW LONDON, Ct., Nov. 15 (AP) — An 80-yard touchdown march in the final period gave Massachusetts State's football team a 6 to 0 victory over Coast Guard Academy, a consistent loser in seven consecutive games this season.

Buddy Evans, a substitute halfback, scored the Staters' touchdown from the two-yard line before 1200 spectators who braved near freezing temperatures.

UHLE TO COACH

CHICAGO, Nov. 15 (INS)—George Uhle, star pitcher for the Cleveland Indians in the 20's has been signed as a Cub coach, officials of the Chicago National League baseball club announced.

TERRIERS CLASH KEEPS B. C. ON HOP

Frank Leahy and his Boston College grid crowd are letting no grass grow under their feet these afternoons, because of a game of football they have on tap at Fenway Park, Saturday, with Pat Hanley's Boston University eleven.

As usual, Leahy is pessimistic about the outcome, and yesterday when a visitor extended belated congratulations on his success in Detroit Frank mournfully replied "Thanks, it's probably the last time you'll be congratulating me this season."

With Kansas State and Holy Cross following the peppy Terriers on the list, the Eagle mentor may have something there. It's possible though that Leahy's extra coating of gloom had been received from scout Johnny Druze recitation of the terrific power of the K-Staters, whom he had seen last Saturday—the day the Kansans almost upset the great Oklahoma Sooners.

Judging by his work in yesterday's scrimmage between the second team and the Frosh, and the fact that first string Vito Ananis is showing the wear and tear of so much rugged competition, sophomore Frank Maznicki will probably see his share of action this week-end.

In Detroit Ananis and Lightnin' Lou Montgomery shared the right halfback duties, while Maznicki sat out the contest as a possible fullback substitute, because Frank Davis, standout sophomore fullback, had been left at home with an infected throat.

While Maznicki was running wild yesterday, his sophomore classmate, Justin McGowan, the Eagle's new quarterback candidate, was doing a great second day job at calling plays and signals.

After the scrimmage Coach Leahy couldn't put McGowan's status in a positive vein. "I'll use him at quarterback Saturday," said Frank, "but his starting status is still doubtful."

On the "B" team with McGowan and Maznicki were Jauron, lhb; Kissell, fb, and a line which read Pasuik, le; Levanitis, lt; Galvani, lg; Dubzinski, c; Tassinari, rg; Mahorn, rt, and Strumski, re.

ROOM AND BOARD — By Eugene Ahern

YES, DUNCAN, LAD, AS I SAID,—THIS OLD MECHANICAL IRON BANK WAS THE FOUNDATION OF MY FORTUNE!—THE ROOT THAT GREW THE GREAT PUFFLE TREE OF WEALTH!
MM-M—
STARTING WITH PENNIES, AS A YOUNGSTER, I SAVED UNTIL I WAS A TITAN IN FINANCE!—HAW,—WHAT AFFECTION I HAVE FOR THIS CHILDISH INSTRUMENT OF THRIFT!—AHM—YOU MAY WELL BELIEVE ME,—I WOULDN'T TAKE $5000 FOR IT NOW!—NAY!
I'D SELL IT FOR THAT MUCH!—THEN I'D BUY A NEW BANK FOR $5 AND PUT TH'OTHER $4995 IN IT!
HE'S RICH IN IMAGINATION—

Boston After Dark

mentation in his band, probably has the part-time services at least of a private arranger . . .

OUT WOONSOCKET WAY a brand new box-office stimulant is about to be tried, and you can bet that the so-called "eyes of the industry" will be turned in that direction for the next few weeks . . . The idea is an adaptation of the question-and-answer vogue which has swept radio so that it fits the operation of a movie house . . . Once a week a "Cash Quiz Night" has been set aside at the Woonsocket National Theater . . . A half-hour program of questions and answers, with audience participation, is expected to be amusing, entertaining—and profitable to a score or so persons . . .

IT'S A BOSTON-BORN idea, and the largest New England movie theater chain has a call on its first employment in this territory . . . With the astute Sheldon H. Fairbanks, a many-sided Boston showman, at the helm prospects for the "quiz night" notion are seen as fairly bright . . . It carries no possible conflict with the law as a "lottery" because the correct answering of questions would seem to be more than a matter of chance . . . Some states, Rhode Island among them, prohibit "screeno," "bank night" and other box-office bypos of that familiar ilk . . .

THE ESSENTIAL KINDLINESS OF George Clarke, the "Man About Boston," may be detected in his reference to your reporter in his Tuesday column . . . George was talking about Phil Regan's role in "Du Barry Was a Lady," that of a columnist . . . It was a good piece of casting, Mr. Clarke was ready to admit and did, except that columnists can't sing . . . "Mr. George Holland is the only singer among us," he said . . . He might have made it "the only tenor among us" . . . Being classified as a tenor, for some reason, has come to carry an unpleasant connotation . . . Mr. Regan is one of the notably obvious exceptions . . . Phil used to be a cop

DUNN TO QUIT PLAYING ROLE OF SAMARITAN

Jimmy Dunn, Northeastern is all through being a Good Samaritan.

Last Saturday afternoon just before the Northeastern-Upsala game, Paul Woerner, Viking coach discovered that Charlie Lennon, one of his backs had left his cleats at home.

Jimmy Dunn loaned Lennon a pair of shoes and in reciprocation, Mr. Lennon ran wild and personally escorted his mates to a 26 to 13 victory over Northeastern.

"If it happens next year," chirped Jimmy, "he'll play in stocking feet."
